The problem still occurs with both duplicates and near-duplicates.

It might save some time if you could set it up so I can move my cursor on the screen and go through the process I did previously, so you see exactly what I did. I will also check in a while and see if the problem persists today, as Mark was looking at it last night. Am going to our cafeteria now to give my office a chance to cool down - air does not run at night, and its often a chance for a check-in with some of the higher-level politicals.

Randy,

Here is a bucket with the July 20 "singles" that you can use for coding today:

Did you want me to set up the dataset and assign the coders?

For the other concerns, we need to schedule a web meeting so I can see the issue in real time. When are you free this morning?

Thanks,
Stu
