What's the difference between pink and yellow BLM lands on the maps . . .

Some of the lands administered by BLM are designated in pink on our maps. The government purchased most these lands from homesteaders under the Bankhead Jones Farm Tenant Act. The BLM land designated in yellow is public domain land. Both types of land are open to the public for recreation and subject to access conditions outlined below.

Land status information was correct at the time the maps were printed. However, due to land sales and exchanges, some parcels are no longer administered by BLM and other parcels have been acquired. If you have questions regarding land status, contact the local BLM office.

In Montana, BLM offices are located in Billings, Butte, Dillon, Glasgow, Great Falls, Havre, Lewistown, Malta, Miles City and Missoula. There are also BLM offices in Dickinson, North Dakota, and Belle Fourche, South Dakota.

A word about access . . .

Most of the eight million acres of public land administered by the BLM in Montana is open year round to public use. The public can use these lands for recreation unless the lands have been officially closed due to fire danger or other emergency hazard. Sometimes roads or lands may be closed to protect resource values. Check with the local BLM office regarding conditions.

Government roads, thoroughfares or waterways that provide legal access may be used to gain access to public lands. Persons who believe they are improperly denied access to public lands should notify the nearest BLM office after identifying the location on a map. Keep in mind, however, that the public CANNOT CROSS PRIVATE LANDS to reach public land if no public thoroughfare exists. The landowner's permission must be obtained before crossing private lands.

Confusion sometimes arises when BLM-administered land is leased for grazing. The lease does not alter or restrict authorized public use of the land, and grazing lessees cannot maintain locked gates, signs or other devices on public lands. A few lessees participate in a formal program in which BLM-administered lands used for grazing can be closed to public use IF a corresponding amount of private lands is made available to the public. Such lands must be clearly posted with open and closed signs.

OHV use . . .

If you drive a car, truck, all-terrain vehicle, four-wheeler or motorcycle on BLM lands in Montana, North Dakota or South Dakota, you must stay on existing roads and trails. With few exceptions, "cross-country" OHV use is prohibited. In addition, individual BLM offices may close or open particular routes. Obey signs, carry a map and check with your local BLM office to obtain current travel information.

Buckle Up, America, because seat belts save lives, lower accident costs, reduce injuries and because federal law requires the use of seat belts when you are on public land.
