To whom it may concern;

I have lived in the Worthington/Oberlain area for 50+ years and have ridden my horse over this area all that time. There is a large herd of Elk that inhabit this area as well as deer and the complete assortment of creature. It is a beautiful area with an extrodenary view of our Rogue Valley.

This area is used by horsemen, hikers as well as hunters and is easily accesable for use being close to the valley.

Until the offroaders and especially the Mud Boggers found the area it was a peaceful and pleasent place to ride, walk and even some use for vehicles. The Boggers use it in the winter and leave ruts that wash into gullys - so deep and dangerous even a horse can not cross safely. If the vehicles are shut out by gates, rock piles or the like, they will just cut fence and enter at a new place.

Please save this area from further destruction.

Sincerly
