Dear State Director of Geospatial Services F. David Radford,

Dear Bureau of Land Management,

It doesn't take much to realize that there are very few truly wild places left on planet earth, especially in the continental U.S.. The boundary waters are just that: a last stand of what this earth once looked like in all its beauty. Any action that could possibly harm this land should not be taken no matter the cost. Generations from now will look back, not on those that sold out the earth for their own gain, but instead on those that risked much for the survival of our planet. Please reconsider the actions being taken in the Boundary waters or maybe give it an extended visit yourself before considering any action.

Sincerely,
Caleb Hesington
