To whom it concerns,

Regarding the Northwest Revision Plan for logging Oregon's forests. For one, in a time when industrialized nations are paying developing countries money not to cut their forests because of the importance of these forests in protecting the entire planet from global heating, any revision in the current plan is not logical. The scientific reality of global heating is no longer debated by the worlds scientists.

Two, the push by the industries with monetary interests for wanting to revise the Northwest's current forestry plan back to a time when scientist had much less information about what constitutes a health forest, is a money grab. They have no real concern for what is best for Oregon Forests, or its people. Revising the Northwest's current forestry plan to compensate for a loss of federal subsidies is digging one hole to fill another.

Third, revising the Northwest's current forestry plan to make up for lost federal subsidies is a knee jerk reaction that shows little faith in the intellegent people of the Pacific Northwest to solve this money problem in a creative, intelligent, and sustainable manner. There are new techno -LOGICAL industries that can resolve Oregon's current money situation. Thinking is in order, not haste. Proper legislation , not hand outs to cronies. There are also new building materials and paper pulp sources other that our forests.

Lastly, Douglas Fir farms, are not forests !

Thank you for the opportunity to comment on this important decision that impacts future generations, and our planet.

Respectfully,

Darin Garth Henry
