Industrial Fire Precaution Level moves to level 4 - shutdown

HINES, Ore. – Effective today, August 19, 2015, the Burns Interagency Fire Zone is implementing Industrial Fire Precaution Level four – shutdown – on lands administered by the Bureau of Land Management (BLM) Burns District and the Malheur National Wildlife Refuge. The shutdown applies to woods workers and other forest industrial users and prohibits on public land: power saw use; cable yarding; blasting; welding or cutting of metal; tractor/skidder, feller-buncher, forwarder, or shovel logging operations; and any other potentially spark-emitting operations.

Fire danger is VERY HIGH and public use restrictions remain in effect. Campfires are permitted only within designated BLM campgrounds, and any driving or parking MUST be in an area clear of all flammable materials – berm to berm. Ignition of fireworks on all public land is always prohibited.

The Malheur National Forest portion of the Burns Interagency Fire Zone is also at Industrial Fire Caution Level four, but has more stringent public use restrictions in place, which include absolutely no campfires (even within designated U.S. Forest Service campgrounds) and no internal combustion engine operation, except motor vehicles.

Visitors should use extreme caution when visiting public lands this time of year. For a map of the restricted use area, please visit the Burns District BLM office at 28910 Hwy 20 West in Hines.

The BLM manages more than 245 million acres of public land, the most of any Federal agency. This land, known as the National System of Public Lands, is primarily located in 12 Western states, including Alaska. The BLM also administers 700 million acres of sub-surface mineral estate throughout the nation. The BLM's mission is to manage and conserve the public lands for the use and enjoyment of present and future generations under our mandate of multiple-use and sustained yield. In Fiscal Year 2014, the BLM generated $5.2 billion in receipts from public lands.
