

Tough Choice #1

You are at least 70 miles from the nearest trading post, and you are running dangerously low on supplies. You encounter a family of seven who has run completely out of food.

Would you...

A) Wish them the best, but continue on the trail.

You know that leaving them could mean death for the whole party, but you are concerned that your own supplies will not hold out. You must look out for your own family first.

B) Offer them some of your depleting stock of food and continue on even though you know that you may find yourself in the same situation soon.

Everyone has to look out for each other on the trail.

C) Divide your food up evenly and have the family join yours and travel together.

You know that you will all run out of food soon, but you hope that another generous wagon train will help you to the trading post.
