

Emigrants looked for landmarks along the Oregon Trail to judge the progress of their journey. The landmarks might be a strange land formation such as Chimney Rock or a solitary tree such as the Lone Pine Tree in a valley of the Blue Mountains.