Dear BLM Planning Team:

We need to save whatever old growth we have left for future generations. There is so very little left! Its time to stop our plundering and start saving what we have and restoring what we have ruined.

As you begin to revise planning for our 2.6 million acres of public forests in western Oregon, please protect the remaining mature and old-growth forests. By doing so you will safeguard our water supplies, protect essential habitat for endangered salmon, mitigate climate change, and create new recreation opportunities for the future.

Restoration of degraded BLM forestlands could provide significant employment opportunity in the region. Thinning previously clearcut areas, decommissioning harmful roads and enhancing habitat should be the drivers of the planning revision. In no way, should the BLM forestlands be looked at as the sole source of county funding in western Oregon. This outdated model will only lead to false hope and unfulfilled funding goals.

Thanks for considering my comments as you move forward with this critically important process.
