Dear Sirs or Madams,

Moving to the forests of Oregon from Orange County, California, was a conscious, quality-of-life decision for us. Now we find that this quality environment is being attacked on all sides by the WOPR.

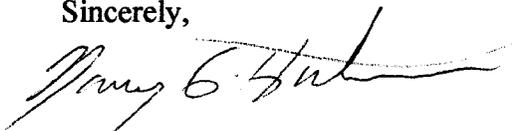

It does not even take an environmental study to see how clear cutting has made a dessert of scrub out of lush forest, contributed to deadly and destructive landslides, and ruined watersheds at a time when clean and available water is needed by people, farmers and animals.

Old growth forests will become more valuable over time because of the increase in population, the lack of preservation, and as more people are appreciating wild life, natural resources, fishing, hiking, the natural quiet and having places to escape the ever increasing pressures of everyday life. Please keep in mind that, once the logging companies are done with this outlandish increase in logging, the damage to old growth forest will not be reversibile for generations, if ever.

At a time when preservation is crucial and money is tight, we find that the BLM is planning on opening the forest to off-road vehicles of all types. These vehicles are not just destructive to plant and animal life they take away any peace and enjoyment that the forest offers. This country has more than enough motorized roads without opening the forest to more desecration.

Please restore faith in an bureaucracy that should have everyone's best interest in mind, for now and the future, and not sell out to companies that want to makes a large and temporary profit at our expense.

Sincerely,

Nancy and Gary Hultman
