

Wolf Creek Falls Trail

The 1.2 mile long Wolf Creek Falls trail follows a picturesque stream through an old growth forest to a cascading two-tier waterfall. River flows vary throughout the year as the falls plummet over 50 and 75 foot high rock cliffs before plunging into deep pools. In the wet winter and spring months, the massive upper falls shows it's strength. Spring brings lush vegetation and wildflowers. In summer, a lower water flow highlights a narrow funnel of water that has carved a channel into the smooth rock surface.

The hike begins at a large arched footbridge which spans Little River. A single picnic site is located half a mile up the trail. The trail is easy to this point, but cannot be considered accessible to people using wheelchairs because of the 13% slope over the footbridge. From the picnic site to the falls, the trail is moderately steep for short lengths.

Camping is available at US Forest Service campgrounds on Little River Road and at BLM's Cavitt Creek Falls Campground. Other waterfalls on the Umpqua National Forest in the Little River area include: Grotto, Hemlock, Yakso, and Shadow Falls. Check out the Thundering Waters brochure for more information, you can pick it up at the Roseburg BLM and Roseburg Umpqua National Forest offices.
