

Escalante Area Day Trips

Are You Ready?

What type of vehicle are you driving?

This is a rugged place. Many parts of the region are neither smoothly paved nor well marked. In some cases, you need a high-clearance vehicle with four-wheel drive and a good map. Check road conditions before you go.

How much time do you have?

Most activities in this region take longer than you'd think due to road conditions and vast distances. Check out our recommendations for 1- to 2-hour activities and half- to full-day adventures. Plan for the unexpected.

Are you prepared for this wild landscape?

This is a remote place. Most hiking routes are not marked. Cellular phone service is unreliable. Food and other services are only available in local communities. Don't head out without planning for this. Take maps, food, proper shoes and clothing, and at least 4 liters (1 gallon) of water per person, per day.

What is the weather forecast?

Weather dramatically impacts this landscape and your safety. Extreme heat can lead to serious illness. Lightning strikes are common, and dangerous thunderstorms often produce torrential rain that leads to flash floods. Heavy rain and snow quickly make roads impassable. Always be aware of weather conditions.

The Escalante River links a diverse array of agencies, elevations, and ecosystems, providing endless challenges and rewards for the prepared visitor. This guide represents several opportunities on public and surrounding lands.

These lands hold a special place in the soul of pioneers, explorers, Native Americans, and travelers from all walks of life. It is not an easy place to visit — it is primitive, remote and unforgiving. Because of these qualities it is also rewarding. With your care it will retain those elements of challenge, untrammelled beauty, and frontier spirit.

Your safety is your responsibility. Be prepared and know your limits.

- Very few routes are marked or maintained. Keep yourself oriented.
- Road conditions change rapidly. High clearance or 4WD may be required.
- Summer temperatures in the desert can be lethal. Avoid hiking in the heat.
- Flash floods are a significant danger. Do not enter canyons if rain threatens. Dangerous thunderstorms often produce torrential rain that leads to flash floods, sometimes miles away from the storm.
- Respect wildlife. This is their home.
- Soil crust is alive and should not be trampled. Stay on existing routes.
