What it takes to be a successful ENVIROMENTAL EDUCATOR

INCLUSIVITY
You create learning environments in which everyone feels welcome, valued, safe and empowered.

KNOWLEDGE
You are a skilled outdoors person and you know how to research to learn even more. And you inspire others to want to learn, too.

COMMUNICATION
You can talk with audiences of all different ages, backgrounds, interests and perspectives and make science fun and exciting.

CREATIVITY
You keep programs fun and engaging. You come up with ways to explain ideas that appeal to all sorts of different learning styles.

PLAYFULNESS
You are always willing to try new things, be silly, and look at the world from unexpected angles.

FLEXIBILITY
You are adaptable! You are prepared to change things up to keep programs safe, engaging, and in tune with the environment around you.

PASSION
You love to connect people to nature, deepen their understanding of science and natural resources, and help them become better stewards of the public lands.

TEAMWORK
You are ready to help your team to be successful no matter the task.

PATIENCE
No matter how long it takes kids to put on snowshoes or someone to understand the concepts you are trying to convey, you never lose your cool.

KNOWLEDGE
You are a skilled outdoors person and you know how to research to learn even more. And you inspire others to want to learn, too.

CURIOSITY
You have an desire to learn! You are a keen observer of nature and are constantly looking at things in new and different ways.

CREATIVITY
You keep programs fun and engaging. You come up with ways to explain ideas that appeal to all sorts of different learning styles.

CURIOSITY
You have an desire to learn! You are a keen observer of nature and are constantly looking at things in new and different ways.

PATIENCE
No matter how long it takes kids to put on snowshoes or someone to understand the concepts you are trying to convey, you never lose your cool.

Being a BLM environmental educator can also take education, of course. Find out what it takes to be one at https://www.blm.gov/careers/careers-in-blm.

BLM ALASKA ENVIRONMENTAL EDUCATION

Our educators work with community and recreation partners to provide opportunities for people to spend time outdoors. By engaging young people in learning and recreation on public lands, we can nurture the next generation of conservation stewards and leaders.

FY2021 Statewide Engagement

131 outreach programs
98 education programs
42 Every Kid Outdoors programs
45 statewide partnerships
50 Alaska communities served
5,305 total learners engaged

Learn more about our Environmental Education Program at https://www.blm.gov/learn