Today, Campbell Tract is an educational site for residents of Anchorage and visitors, and the Alaska Sled Dog Heritage Center is a part of the military installation who launched forest fire suppression activities across the state from this airstrip.

Campbell Tract offers 12 miles of trails on adjacent Far North Bicentennial Park and Heritage Land Bank lands owned by the Municipality of Anchorage.

Many more than 350,000 users enjoy Campbell Tract trails each year. Campbell Tract is closed to recreation use during winter.

General Rules
- No alcohol consumption
- No use of firearms or handheld guns
- No disturbing or removal of historic artifacts
- No camping or fires
- No snowcutting or clearing vegetation
- No harassing wildlife
- No ATV, side-by-sides, motorcycles or motorized vehicles
- No off-trail dogs
- No snowmobiles or other snowmobile vehicles

View Wildlife
Campbell Tract is home to a variety of boreal forest plants and wildlife. Be alert for moose, porcupines, lynx, ferrets, squirrels, snowshoe hares, red squirrels, as well as black and brown bears. Kings and Chilkat Bald Eagles are common sights in the winter. For your safety, give moose a wide berth and a chance to move away. Make noise to avoid bear encounters and NEVER run from a bear.

The Alaska Sled Dog Heritage Center is located on the island in Campbell Tract. Call 907-267-1246 for more information. The Center offers programs promoting awareness and appreciation for the natural environment.