

Plan Highlights

- Hunting, fishing and trapping (with proper license) are authorized through only non-motorized and non-mechanized access.
- No restrictions on number of groups allowed to float each river daily (group-size limit is 15 persons).
- Groups and individuals embarking on float trips must complete a BLM self-issue permit, available at river launch sites or online.
- Boaters, including kayakers, must carry and use a water-tight portable toilet, and empty it into an EPA-approved dump station after their trip.
- Riverside campfires must be contained in a metal fire pan or on a raised fire blanket. Only dead and down woody material may be used for firewood. All campers – river or upland – must pack-in/pack-out all food, trash, burned material, etc.
- Several existing trails are designated for both pedestrian and equestrian use.
- All proposed activities that would involve soil or vegetation disturbance or the use of motorized/mechanized vehicles or equipment must be evaluated to determine whether and to what extent the proposal could be authorized to minimize impacts to wilderness character and wild and scenic river values.

Special Recreation Permits

The BLM will issue Special Recreation Permits to the following entities – including commercial enterprises – if they 1) provide services deemed necessary for realizing specified purposes of the wilderness areas, 2) are wilderness-dependent and 3) they do not degrade wilderness character:

- licensed outfitters and guides
- entities whose mission includes promoting wilderness ethics, Tread Lightly!, Leave No Trace or environmental education
- entities whose primary purpose is to support individuals with disabilities
