Updates from Field Managers

Gunnison Field Office with Jon Kaminsky

- Gunnison field office is looking to address issues like sage grouse, bighorn-domestic sheep litigation issues, and environmental factors, including drought and human-caused disturbances.
- The GFO is currently evaluating a programmatic hazardous fuels reduction project on public lands managed by the BLM near Powderhorn, CO. The total project area consists of 90,725 acres and includes 53,877 acres within the Powderhorn Wilderness and Wilderness Study Area.
- The GFO saw significant increases in visitor use on the Alpine Loop in the last year, particularly in July and August, 2021. Plans for 2022 include improving and designating dispersed campsites, modernizing the Mill Creek Campground, adding additional toilets, working with partner groups on outreach and education, and working with the counties to supplement and define parking areas.
- The GFO plans to have all campsites at the Oh-be-Joyful Campground and a percentage of the Mill Creek campsites reservable through Recreation.gov.
- The GFO plans to initiate an environmental analysis to consider allowing electric bicycles, or e-bikes, on non-motorized, single-track trails managed by the GFO.

Uncompahgre Field Office with Suzanne Copping

- The UFO is implementing the third year of a five-year strategic plan to fully process and renew expiring grazing permits. As moderate to extreme drought conditions persist, they are working with permittees one-on-one to manage grazing accordingly.

- Construction of the Rim Road staging and camping area is complete. This development will help BLM support trail events and increasing use in the area. Just 15 minutes from downtown Montrose, check it out sometime!
- UFO continues to appreciate Delta County's proactive coordination of volunteer cleanups in 2022 in the Adobes with the Thunder Mountain Wheelers and Delta High School Honor Society.
- Raptor and plant surveys are under way at Jumbo Mountain, and a route-by-route inventory and evaluation is planned for June, followed by alternatives development.
- The oldest known human occupation site in Colorado, Eagle Rock Shelter, has piqued the curiosity of locals and visitors alike. In 2019, after several years of methodical excavation by professional archaeologists, the excavation concluded, and the site was backfilled to close the excavation pits. The site is well known locally and receives substantial public visitation. The BLM has funded a contract for the initial interpretive design at the site.
- Gunnison Gorge National Conservation Area is working with the International Dark Sky Association to explore the possibility of certification as a Dark Sky area.

Tres Rios Field Office with Connie Clementson

- A part of the Durango Area Hazardous Fuels Reduction Project was delayed due to not being within burn plan parameters for a 717-acre prescribed burn. Conditions will be monitored to determine potential for burning later in the summer/early fall.
- The Tres Rios Field Office continues to participate in an inter-governmental working group with the City of Durango, La Plata County, CPW, and the San Juan National Forest on recreation concerns.
- Canyons of the Ancients National Monument will welcome DDAT, a Native American jazz trumpet ensemble, as a part of the Artist in Residency program.
- Canyons of the Ancients will host a field trip to the Yellowjacket and Flodine grazing allotments to address concerns brought forward by conservation advocates and the grazing community.
- The field office is also working to be proactive with invasive weed control programs.
