To whom it may concern:

I live in the vicinity of Lewisville Lake near Lewisville, TX. I have recently learned that the bureau will be auctioning leases to frack in that area. The dam that holds back the lake from millions of residents to the south is listed as one of the most at risk for failure in the country. The water in the reservoir holds the drinking water for millions of residents.

With recent the increase in earthquakes in this area that could threaten an already fragile dam structure and potential for contamination of the lake with frack fluids, it is much too risky to allow fracking in this context. You must reconsider or make clear to me and many others how any benefit could justify the risks involved.

Sincerely,

Louise Griffith
