No drilling under or around Lake Lewisville

Recent events have begun to compile evidence that fracking both contaminates water supplies and contributes to geological disturbances. Given that Lake Lewisville is not only a main water source for many communities and an environment in which many different wild animals live – and also has some structural problems with its dam, it is one of the worst possible places to subject to the stresses of fracture drilling.

Please consider these facts along with all of the other voices of the residents and municipal governments in the area in determining that drilling in this area is not warranted. The net value of drilling to all local residents and companies will be companies to truly understand what is being sold.

Keep Lake Lewisville and its watershed lands clean.
