A recent newspaper article in the Porter Record Chronicle reported that you are going to open the northwest side of Lake Lewisville in Texas to oil and gas companies because you got a study that said it would have ~~not~~ "no environmental impact." Guess they missed the fact that the area has already had earthquakes, is a major source of drinking water, and a major recreational area.

I read that you posted intent in November.
Perhaps you should have sent newspapers the story since I never saw a posting.
I'm opposed to any more "oil exploration" in North Texas and especially not around any water sources.
