BLM Rocky Mountain Resource Advisory Council Meeting Announced

CAÑON CITY, Colo. – The Bureau of Land Management Rocky Mountain Resource Advisory Council will meet in Glenwood Springs, Colo. March 30, 2023, from 9 a.m. to 1:45 p.m.

"BLM is dedicated to ensuring our management of public lands truly serves the needs of our fellow citizens. This advisory council is a tool that allows us to work directly with community leaders representing a wide range of interests," said Cathy Cook, the manager of the BLM Colorado Rocky Mountain District.

Planned agenda items include a discussion about partnership opportunities, recreation fees, and recruitment efforts, as well as electing a committee chair and setting agenda topics for the next meeting, which is planned for the summer of 2023. A 30-minute public comment period is scheduled to follow, starting at 1:45 p.m. Depending on the number of people who wish to comment, the amount of time for comments may be limited.

Each of the three 15-member RACs in Colorado are forums for providing advice and recommendations to the BLM on diverse resource and land management issues. To learn more about BLM Colorado's RACs, visit https://www.blm.gov/get-involved/resource-advisory-council/near-you/colorado.

-BLM-

The BLM manages more than 245 million acres of public land located primarily in 12 Western states, including Alaska. The BLM also administers 700 million acres of sub-surface mineral estate throughout the nation. In fiscal year 2018, the diverse activities authorized on BLM-managed lands generated $105 billion in economic output across the country. This economic activity supported 471,000 jobs and contributed substantial revenue to the U.S. Treasury and state governments, mostly through royalties on minerals.
