

Dalton Highway Campgrounds

The Bureau of Land Management (BLM) manages recreation sites along the Dalton Highway, from the Yukon River to the north side of the Brooks Range. Within this corridor, the BLM maintains the Yukon Crossing Contact Station, the Arctic Circle Wayside, the Arctic Interagency Visitor Center in Coldfoot, and 4 campgrounds. Campgrounds are open approximately May–September, and are first come, first served (no reservations).

Campground and RV dump station fees are payable with cash, check, or by credit card using the free Recreation.gov mobile app. To use a credit card, download the mobile app prior to your departure from Fairbanks. On site, scan the QR code on the fee station sign to pay your camping fee. Your credit card will be charged once you are back in cell service.

▲ Galbraith Lake Milepost 275

This campground has 12 campsites, bear-resistant trash cans, and 1 vault toilet. Flowing water is available at a nearby creek, but must be filtered or treated before consumption. Although the campground sits about a mile away from the lake itself, it affords spectacular views of the lake and Brooks Range, with Gates of the Arctic National Park and Preserve to the west and the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge to the east. Fee: $12/night

▲ Marion Creek Milepost 180

There are 27 gravel sites, 2 of which are designated wheelchair accessible. Each campsite has a fire ring and picnic table. Fourteen sites are pull-through, allowing easy access for RVs. The campground has potable water, vault toilets, and bear-resistant trash cans and food storage lockers. There is no electricity and no dump station. The Marion Creek Falls Trailhead is located in the campground. Fee: $12/night

▲ Arctic Circle Milepost 115

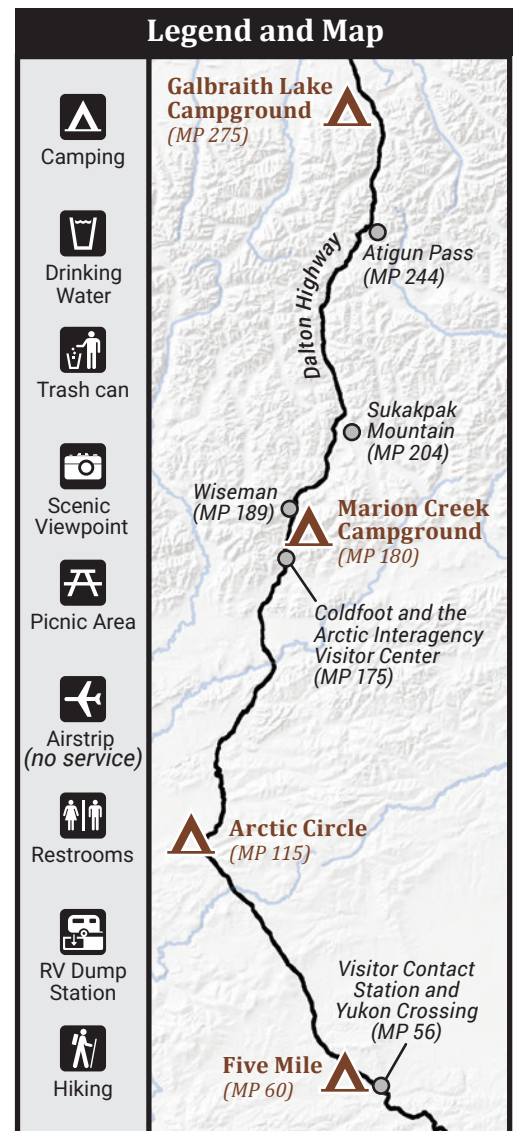

The campground is accessed from the road beginning at the north end of the Arctic Circle Wayside. Renovated in 2021, the campground offers bear-resistant trash cans and food storage lockers, 2 vault toilets, and 19 level campsites with fire rings and picnic tables. There are 2 walk-in sites and 6 pull-through sites. Water is not available. The nearest potable water is at Five Mile Campground (55 miles south) or Marion Creek Campground (65 miles north). Fee: $12/night

▲ Five Mile Milepost 60

This campground offers a vault toilet, potable water from an artesian well, the only RV dump station along the Dalton Highway, and 7 gravel campsites. Each campsite has a picnic table and fire ring. Dump Station Fee: $5
