Good Day:

No seismic testing should be allowed in the Arctic Refuse. It is a Refuse, which means protecting the wilderness, wildlife, historic, geological, cultural, and scenic values.

The coastal plain will be permanently harmed by seismic tests. Tundra is very fragile and the scars remain indefinitely.

The majority of Alaskans living in the state do not want this area explored or harmed. It goes against the values of Alaska Native people; this is a sacred place.

Leave it alone; the money isn't worth destroying it. Once gone is forever.

Sincerely,

Terry Cummings
