Hi Ron,

Based on feedback from Rem, Brian, Cindy Barrett, Yavapai County and a few other sources, here is a compilation of some things we have all talked about and should consider for the next public comment period:

I would like to go ahead and plan for 60 days on the second one. I think we need two open house (maybe more?), one at a school auditorium (or something similar) in Yarnell and one at the cafeteria next to the community center in Skull Valley if that's possible. We should probably not use the Skull Valley Community Center for any more public outreach events that we anticipate more than 80 to 100 people, it was out of fire code and there were some public safety issues with there being one good entrance, and it obviously creates the wrong atmosphere.

I think the next meeting should have an automated overview video, not a presenter, no podium, possibly no mics at all. We should try probably try to arrange everything in a circle with no true focal point, and maybe some sort of recap at the end once the energy has been dissipated, but that may lead to individuals derailing the entire process to get to the end. If we do a recap and question and answer it should probably be done informally and not on the formal schedule. Any other creative crowd control solutions from others are greatly appreciated, a few people are drowning out their neighbors' voices and we need to hear from as many people as possible.

We should ask the operator to expand to her broader mailing list (she already has one compiled) and incorporate the mailing list resent to us from the county this week.

I think we have already started an email list and have decided to pay for paid newspaper space. We should also post a notice in the Skull Valley post office, put flyer/post cards in all the Skull Valley PO boxes in the post office, and submit a notice to the Yarnell's "The Yellow Sheet".

I will talk to Brian about updating our webpage to have a way to join our mailing and emailing lists.
