

Where Are the Birds?

Twenty-four raptor species spend all or part of the year in the Snake River Birds of Prey National Conservation Area.

	Species	JAN.	FEB.	MAR.	APR.	MAY	JUN.	JUL.	AUG.	SEPT.	OCT.	NOV.	DEC.
	Breeding Raptors	American Kestrel	Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Golden Eagle		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Ferruginous Hawk		Small number in NCA through the winter	Migrating	National Conservation Area					Migrating	Small number in the NCA through the winter
Northern Harrier		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Osprey		Central & South America		Migrating	National Conservation Area					Migrating	Central and South America
Prairie Falcon		Migrating	National Conservation Area						Moves to Higher Elevation Prairies		Migrating	Southwest U.S.
Red-tailed Hawk		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Swainson's Hawk		Argentina		Migrating	National Conservation Area					Migrating	Argentina
Turkey Vulture		SW U.S. & Mexico	Migrating	National Conservation Area					Migrating	Southwest U.S. and Mexico
Barn Owl		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Burrowing Owl		SW U.S. & Mexico	Migrating	National Conservation Area					Migrating	Southwest U.S. and Mexico
Great Horned Owl		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Long-eared Owl		National Conservation Area						Migrating	Higher Elevations		Migrating	National Conservation Area
N. Saw-whet Owl		Migrating	National Conservation Area				Migrating	Currently Unknown - Possibly Southwest U.S. (Arizona)
Short-eared Owl		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Western Screech Owl		Can be seen in the NCA year-round
Migrating Raptors	Bald Eagle	National Conservation Area			Central and Northern Idaho & other regions further north
	Cooper's Hawk	National Conservation Area		Migrating			Higher elevation areas in Idaho			Migrating		National Conservation Area
	Gyr Falcon	Possibly in National Conservation Area		Migrating	Arctic regions of Canada and Alaska					Migrating	Possibly in National Conservation Area
	Merlin	National Conservation Area		Migrating	Canada and Alaska					Migrating	National Conservation Area
	Northern Goshawk	National Conservation Area		Migrating	Central Idaho Mountains/Forests			Migrating		National Conservation Area
	Peregrine Falcon	Southwest U.S. & Northern Mexico		Migrating	Historically used the National Conservation Area			Higher elevation plains		Migrating		Southwest U.S. & Northern Mexico
	Rough-legged Hawk	National Conservation Area				Migrating	Arctic regions of Canada and Alaska				Migrating	National Conservation Area
	Sharp-shinned Hawk	National Conservation Area		Migrating			Higher elevations in Idaho			Migrating		National Conservation Area

 In the NCA

 Not in the NCA

