Potential response to question regarding interim land use plan. This is included in our draft FAQs. Let me know if that meets your needs.

Under the proclamation, the BLM and the USFS must jointly prepare a management plan for the monument. A starting date for the plan has not been determined. (b) (5) - DPP
[REDACTED]
[REDACTED]

When the agencies begin to develop the plan, there will be many opportunities for public involvement. During land use planning, the agencies will also collaborate with state, local, and tribal governments. The management plan will be used to guide future management decisions and ensure protection of natural and cultural resources.

Paul? Austin at KSJD radio is asking: Has the BLM completed an interim management plan for the Bears Ears monument?

Good afternoon:

Lisa Bryant, Public Affairs Specialist at the BLM's Green River and Canyon Country Districts in southeastern Utah referred me to this address to find more information about President Trump's review of national monuments.

We are a local radio station that serves rural communities near two of the national monuments currently under review by the DOI: Bears Ears and Canyons of the Ancients.

We are especially interested in how the Department will reach out to the community members in our listening area during the review process. We serve the towns of Blanding, Monticello and Bluff in southeastern Utah, and Cortez, Dolores and Mancos in southwestern Colorado. We also serve tribal communities near the monuments, including Aneth, Kayenta, and Mexican Hat in the Navajo Nation and Towaoc and White Mesa on Ute Mountain Ute Tribal lands.

Would a DOI member familiar with the monument review process be available to record a 5-10 minute interview with us about the DOI's next steps? We would record in taped-to-live format over the phone, and air it on our morning news show.

We are also trying to find a public copy of the interim management plan for the Bears Ears National Monument, but we haven't found it on the Bureau of Land Management or the DOI website. Has the BLM created one? If we missed it, could you please send us a link?

Finally, can you please add our station (news@ksjd.org) to the BLM's press release email list?

Thanks for your help, and we're looking forward to hearing from you.

Sincerely,
Austin Cope
