Randy,

I am back now and would like to schedule a meeting to discuss this. I have no memory of a set of comments that was overlooked.

I have openings at 10 am and noon today. Would either of those work?

No need for a call with NOAA; they are going to look over my shoulder for a few hours while we go through the marine monument comments.

However, we need to address the uncoded archive accompanying Bears Ears. As I suspected on an earlier call, the 2nd archive under "Bears Ears" has not been coded. We all appear to have overlooked it.

There are 117,068 items in this archive, and I started this morning cleaning up the duplicates and realized it is too complicated with all of the Bears Ears buckets and datasets under the same project. After I coded the uncodable and one other group within the dups, I stopped and searched the archive for uncoded items. Of the 117,068 total initially, a search for uncoded items yielded the report below. To simplify addressing this, when you get back would you please give this archive - but not the one titled "Bears Ears" that we did review and code - a new name, and let me know what it is, so we can address these comments without the clutter from the Bears Ears project comments.

Hi Randy,

I apologize for forgetting to send the sample. I have attached it here.

Anyway, I would love to talk to NOAA. Could it be Wednesday? Tomorrow is the last morning of camp then I have a 6 hour drive home after it is done.

If it is time sensitive, I can talk from the car and can be reached on my cell phone after 1 PM.

Thanks,
~Stu

Along with a sample set of marine monument comments exported, I relayed your comment that NOAA could purchase licenses to view our comments. Staff at NOAA would like to talk about what is involved in this and what they would get, tomorrow if possible. I am available any time, and they said they would make your time fit their schedules.
