Secretary Zinke Sends Monument Report to the White House

WASHINGTON – Today, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke sent a draft report to the president which included his findings and recommendations on national monuments that were under review as a result of the April 26, 2017 executive order. The report summary can be read here. The extensive 120-day review included more than 60 meetings with hundreds of advocates and opponents of monument designations, tours of monuments conducted over air, foot, car, and horseback (including a virtual tour of a marine monument), and a thorough review of more than 2.4 million public comments submitted to the Department on regulations.gov. Additionally, countless more meetings and conversations between senior Interior officials and local, state, Tribal, and non-government stakeholders including multiple Tribal listening sessions.

The review was implemented by President Trump in order to restore trust in the multiple-use mission of the Department and to give rural communities a voice in federal land management decisions. In order to make the process transparent and give local residents and stakeholders a voice, the Secretary announced on May 5, 2017 the opening up of a formal comment period for the review, as the President directed. This was the first time ever that a formal comment period was open on regulations.gov for national monuments designated under the Antiquities Act.

“No President should use the authority under the Antiquities Act to restrict public access, prevent hunting and fishing, burden private land, or eliminate traditional land uses, unless such action is needed to protect the object,” said Secretary Zinke. “The recommendations I sent to the president on national monuments will maintain federal ownership of all federal land and protect the land under federal environmental regulations, and also provide a much needed change for the local communities who border and rely on these lands for hunting and fishing, economic development, traditional uses, and recreation.”

While traveling across the country, Secretary Zinke met with hundreds of local stakeholders and heard concerns about some national monuments negatively impacting things like local revenue from federal lands, agriculture, private property rights, public access to land, traditional Tribal uses of the land, and timber harvesting.

Over the 120-day review, Secretary Zinke visited eight national monument sites in six states:

- Bears Ears (UT)
- Grand Staircase Escalante (UT)
- Katahdin Woods and Waters (ME)
- Northeast Canyons and Seamounts
- Cascade Siskiyou (OR & CA)
- Organ Peaks (NM)
- Basin and Range (NV)
- Gold Butte (NV)

The following national monuments were announced to have been removed from review prior to the August 24 deadline:

- Craters of the Moon
- Hanford Reach
- Upper Missouri River Breaks
- Grand Canyon-Parashant
- Canyons of the Ancients
- Sand to Snow

EXECUTIVE SUMMARY BY U.S. SECRETARY OF THE INTERIOR RYAN ZINKE

In 1906, Congress delegated to the President the power to designate a monument under the Antiquities Act (Act). The Act authorizes the President singular authority to designate national monuments without public comment, environmental review, or further consent of Congress. Given this extraordinary executive power, Congress wisely placed limits on the President by defining the objects that may be included within a monument as being “historic landmarks, historic and prehistoric structures, and other objects of historic or scientific interest,” by restricting the authority to Federal lands, and by limiting the size of the monument to “the smallest area compatible with proper care and management of the objects.” Congress retained its authority to make land use designations without such limitations. Even with the restrictive language, use of the Act has not always been without controversy. In fact, even Theodore Roosevelt's first proclamation of the roughly 1,200 acre Devil's Tower in Wyoming was controversial. Since that time, the use of the Act has largely been viewed as an overwhelming American success story and today includes almost 200 of America's greatest treasures.

More recently, however, the Act's executive authority is under scrutiny as administrations have expanded both the size and scope of monument designations. Since 1996 alone, the Act has been used by the President 26 times to create monuments that are over 100,000 acres or more in size and have included private property within the identified external boundaries. While early monument designations focused more on geological formations, archaeological ruins, and areas of historical interest, a more recent and broad interpretation of what constitutes an "object of historic or scientific interest" has been extended to include landscape areas, biodiversity, and view sheds. Moreover, features such as World War II desert bombing craters and remoteness have been included in justifying proclamations.

The responsibility of protecting America's public lands and unique antiquities should not be taken lightly; nor should the authority and the power granted to a President under the Act. No President should use the authority under the Act to restrict public access, prevent hunting and fishing, burden private land, or eliminate traditional land uses, unless such action is needed to protect the object. It is Congress and not the President that has the authority to make protective land designations outside of the narrow scope of the Act, and only Congress retains the authority to enact designations such as national parks, wilderness, and national conservation and recreation areas. The executive power under the Act is not a substitute for a lack of congressional action on protective land designations.

President Trump was correct in tasking the Secretary of the Interior (Secretary) to review and provide recommendations of all monuments that were designated from 1996 to the present that are 100,000 acres or greater in size or made without adequate public consultation. This is far from the first time an examination of scope of monuments has been conducted. Existing monuments have been modified by successive Presidents in the past, including 18 reductions in the size of monuments, and there is no doubt that President Trump has the authority to review and consider recommendations to modify or add a monument.

The methodology used for the review consisted of three steps. The first step was to gather the facts which included the examination of existing proclamations, object(s) to be protected, segregation of the objects (if practical) to meet the "smallest area compatible" requirement, the scientific and rational basis for the boundaries, land uses within the monument, public access concerns and authorized traditional uses, and appropriate environmental and cultural protections. As directed by the President, the second step was to ensure that the local voice was heard by holding meetings with local, state, tribal, and other elected officials as well as meetings with non-profit groups and other stakeholders, as well as providing an online format for public comment. The final step was to review policies on public access, hunting and fishing rights, traditional use such as timber production and grazing, economic and environmental impacts, potential legal conflicts, and provide a report to the President no later than August 24, 2017.

The review found that each monument was unique in terms of the object(s) used for justification, proclamation language, history, management plans, economic impact, and local support. (b)(5) ACP

Despite the apparent lack of adherence to the purpose of the Act, some monuments reflect a long public debate process and are largely settled and strongly supported by the local community. Other monuments remain controversial and contain significant private property within the identified external boundary or overlap with other Federal land designations such as national forests, Wilderness Study Areas, and lands specifically set aside by Congress for timber production.

Public comments can be divided into two principal groups. Proponents tended to promote monument designation as a mechanism to prevent the sale or transfer of public land. This narrative is false and has no basis in fact. Public lands within a monument are federally owned and managed regardless of monument designation under the Act. Proponents also point to the economic benefits from increased tourism from monument recognition. On this point, monument status has a potential economic benefit of increased visitation, particularly to service related industries, outdoor recreation industries, and other businesses dependent or supported by tourism. Increased visitation also places an additional burden and responsibility on the Federal Government to provide additional resources and manpower to maintain these lands to better support increased visitation and recreational activities.

Comments received were overwhelmingly in favor of maintaining existing monuments and demonstrated a well-orchestrated national campaign organized by multiple organizations. Opponents of monuments primarily supported rescinding or modifying the existing monuments to protect traditional multiple use, and those most concerned were often local residents associated with industries such as grazing, timber production, mining, hunting and fishing, and motorized recreation. Opponents point to other cases where monument designation has resulted in reduced public access, road closures, hunting and fishing restrictions, multiple and confusing management plans, reduced grazing allotments and timber production, and pressure applied to private land owners encompassed by or adjacent to a monument to sell.

Secretary Zinke Sends Monument Report to the White House

(WASHINGTON) Today, U.S. Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke sent a report to the president which included his findings and recommendations on national monuments that were under review as a result of the April 26, 2017 executive order. The report summary can be read here. The extensive 120-day review included more than 60 meetings with hundreds of advocates and opponents of monument designations, tours of monuments conducted over air, foot, car, and horseback (including a virtual tour of a marine monument), and a thorough review of more than 2.4 million public comments submitted to the Department on regulations.gov. Additionally, countless more meetings and conversations between senior Interior officials and local, state, Tribal, and non-government stakeholders including multiple Tribal listening sessions.

The review was implemented by President Trump in order to restore trust in the multiple-use mission of the Department and to give rural communities a voice in federal land management decisions. In order to make the process transparent and give local residents and stakeholders a voice, the Secretary announced on May 5, 2017 the opening up of a formal comment period for the review, as the President directed. This was the first time ever that a formal comment period was open on regulations.gov for national monuments designated under the Antiquities Act.

White House Report (Sent Wednesday)

Press Inquiries:

- Many inquiries regarding the National Monument review.
- E&E News: REQUEST--Any reaction to Rep. Grijalva's report yesterday calling the national monuments review an "obvious sham" and asserting Sec. Zinke is not meeting/listening to the public? He said: "Secretary Zinke has toured various sites under review and has claimed to be meeting with all relevant stakeholders and listening to local input. However, media and other reports from the Secretary's trips have been critical of the selective meetings he has chosen to take and the brevity of those meetings."--RESPONSE-- The Congressman's assessment is a wild departure from reality and shouldn't be considered anything more than campaign literature paid for by extreme environmentalists whose real goal is to lock up public lands so people can't use and enjoy them. In addition to missing the mark on the point of the monument review - to give local communities a say - the Congressman's report also fails to take into account the more than 60 meetings the Secretary conducted on the ground with hundreds of local, state, Tribal, and nongovernmental stakeholders including environmental groups and Democratic members of Congress and State officials. (see a partial list for your background below). Additionally, the Congressman's claim that the review is driven by oil and gas exploration is laughable at best. The review, as was outlined in the Executive Order and the Secretary's repeated statements and interviews on the subject, is about restoring trust and giving rural communities a voice in land management decisions. Locals are concerned about losses in revenue, agriculture, hunting and fishing, private property rights, public access to land, traditional Tribal uses of the land, and timber harvesting.
- Fox News: REQUEST--Lillian LeCroy with Fox News Channel. Can you please tell me if Sec. Zinke has any public events today? Also, the Department of Interior's IG released a letter indicating they have opened up an investigation into Sec. Zinke and reports that he threatened the two Alaskan senators over their healthcare votes. Does Sec. Zinke have any response to this?—RESPONSE—Lillian, that's an old letter that NYT just recently stumbled upon. Regarding the call, the Secretary and Senator Murkowski have a great relationship and friendship and the conversation they had was professional. Senator Murkowski has knocked down the characterization of the call, including to Fox News. I'd recommend contacting her office for her statement.

Top Issues and Accomplishments

- Tomorrow, Secretary Zinke will make his recommendation on the status of the 27 National Monuments under review. The rollout plan is still being finalized.
- Tomorrow, Secretary Zinke will be in Montana with Secretary Perdue for an on-site briefing on wildfires in the Pacific Northwest and the Northern Rockies.
- August 25, the NPS turns 101 years old. Secretary Zinke will be at the Great Smokey Mountains National Park for a speech on the historic anniversary, and will also visit the Blue Ridge Parkway.

WEEK AHEAD August 16 thru August 24, 2016

National Park Service:

- August 24: CNN will be at Antietam National Battlefield to film a feature story about the battle, the upcoming 150th anniversary of Antietam National Cemetery on September 17, and projects that will be completed using President Trump's first quarter salary with additional funds from the National Park Foundation, Civil War Trust, and Save Historic Antietam Foundation.
- August TBD: National NPS Release: NPS announcement of annual Rutgers report on NPS Federal Historic Preservation Tax Incentives Program economic impact. Tax credits 2016 contributed $12.3 billion in output to the U.S. economy, added $6.2 billion in GDP. Historic preservation tax incentives encourage investments in historic preservation and revitalization of communities small and large across the country.
- August TBD: National NPS Release: The National Park Service will announce $1.657 million in grants to Indian tribes and museums to assist in consultation, documentation, and repatriation of ancestors and cultural items back to Indian tribes and Native Hawaiian organizations.
- August TBD: National NPS Release: NPS will announce $1.2 million in grants to fund preservation, restoration, and education projects at several Japanese American confinement sites.
- August TBD: National NPS Release: NPS will announce the award of $517,471 in Tribal Heritage grants to 14 American Indian and Native Alaskan organizations to support the protection of America's native cultures.
- August TBD: National NPS Release: NPS will announce that NPS scientists will make audio recordings of the sounds of the solar eclipse in 17 parks spanning nearly 2,700 miles across the country. The project is part of Eclipse Soundscapes, a multi-institutional study from the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory and NASA's Heliophysics Education Consortium that introduces sound aspects of the eclipse to wider audiences.

Bureau of Land Management:

- August 24: BLM-MT staff will attend a meeting hosted by the Executive Vice President of the North Dakota Petroleum Council in Miles City, MT, to discuss Federal ownership/leases on resurvey of the Missouri River, overlapping Communitization Agreements, and Application for Permit to Drill streamlining.

U.S. Geological Survey:

- TBD: Release the USGS Critical Minerals study. Have been coordinating with the WH about possible next steps and rollout plan.

Bureau of Ocean Energy Management:

- August TBD: Local BOEM Release: BOEM Alaska releases Draft EIS for Liberty DPP.
- TBD: BOEM Note to Stakeholders: BOEM will send a note to stakeholders announcing environmental study reports posted to ESPIS from April-June.
- TBD: BOEM Note to Stakeholders: Note to Stakeholders on Information Transfer Meeting to be held in New Orleans August 22-24.
- TBD: BOEM Note to Stakeholders: BOEM will issue Note to Stakeholders on Draft Guidelines for the Use of Design Envelopes for Offshore Wind Energy Facilities.
- TBD: National BOEM Release: BOEM release on Marine Minerals Rule. The rule is finalized and in surnaming.

Emergency Management (new)

The Interior Operations Center (IOC) continues to monitor Tropical Storm Harvey, located approximately 425 miles south-southeast of Port O'Connor, Texas. The storm, as of 5:00 a.m., EDT, carries maximum sustained winds near 45 miles per hour, with potential to reach hurricane status by Friday. Hurricane, Tropical Storm, Storm Surge, and other associated watches and warnings have been issued along the entirety of the Texas coastline.

In advance of landfall, the IOC is continuing coordination with potentially affected DOI bureaus and offices regarding preparatory actions, emergency action plans, and anticipated impacts to DOI personnel, lands, and facilities. Additionally, the Office of Emergency Management is coordinating with FEMA regarding potential DOI support to the federal response effort.

In Washington, the Bridge Creek Fire on the Colville Reservation (BIA) has burned 2,640 (+200) acres and is 33 (+4)-percent contained. The fire is managed by a Type-2 IMT with 515 (+37) personnel assigned, including 61 (no change) DOI personnel. Full containment is expected on September 20.

Outside Media of Interest (new)

Trump To Hear Recommendations For National Monuments.

The Hill (8/23, Cama) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke faces a Thursday deadline “to issue recommendations to the White House for any changes he thinks President Trump should make” to 21 national monument designations. The announcement will “close a chapter on the administration’s highly contentious review that has fueled significant opposition among conservationists and support by Republicans and industries like oil and agriculture that use federal land.” The article notes that “Zinke invited comments from the public on the review, the first time such a formal process has been taken for national monuments,” and “he also traveled to many of the monuments and met with opponents and supporters.”

Interior, Agriculture Secretaries To Visit Montana Wildfire.

The AP (8/23) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue “plan to visit a Montana wildfire command post Thursday as dozens of blazes rage across the western U.S.” Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift “said Wednesday that the two members of President Donald Trump’s cabinet will receive a briefing from firefighters battling a 50-square-mile blaze burning northwest of Missoula.” According to Swift, “the visit was requested by the two Republicans on Montana’s congressional delegation, Sen. Steve Daines and Rep. Greg Gianforte.”

Interior Dept. Agencies Could Move West, High-Level Official Says In Denver.

The Denver Business Journal (8/23, Proctor) reports that senior officials at the Interior Department “are ‘actively looking’ at moving ‘some’ of its agencies out of Washington, D.C., to the western states, a senior Interior official said at a Denver oil and gas forum.”

Commentary: Interior’s New Sage Grouse Protection Efforts Welcomed.

In his column for the Elko (NV) Daily Free Press (8/23, Mitchell), Thomas Mitchell welcomes Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s order to implement “recommendations from a team that reviewed the previous administration’s draconian land use restrictions under the guise of protecting greater sage grouse.” According to Mitchell, the move by the Interior Department “should have a salutary impact on Nevada’s economy.”

Critics: Utah Horse Meeting Is Secretive ‘Slaughter Summit’.

The AP (8/23, Price, Sonner) reports that “swollen populations of federally-protected wild horses roaming 10 Western states are starved and damaging rangelands, Utah and U.S. government officials said at a conference Wednesday, an invitation-only meeting that mustang-protection advocates say is promoting the slaughter of an icon of the American West.” According to the article, “members of Utah’s congressional delegation and a U.S. Interior Department official speaking at the National Horse and Burro Summit in Salt Lake City all described an unsustainable population of wild horses that’s nearly three times the size that federal officials think the rangeland can support.” Meanwhile, “horse-protection groups who weren't allowed into the Utah State University-hosted event protested outside the downtown hotel where it was held, calling it a 'slaughter summit' that's kowtowing to livestock interests, promoting increased roundups and slaughter of wild horses from California to Colorado without public input."

Parks Service Issues Permit For San Francisco Rally.

The AP (8/23, Elias) reports that "federal authorities on Wednesday issued a permit to a politically conservative group for a Saturday afternoon rally in San Francisco that local officials fear could turn violent." The National Park Service "had earlier told Patriot Prayer leader Joey Gibson that he had permission for the event, but withheld issuing the permit until the group agreed to several conditions, which include banning guns, tiki torches and other items that can be turned into weapons." The NPS "said denying Patriot Prayer a permit would violate the organization's free speech rights."

Coming Soon To The National Mall: A Pro-Trump Protest, Juggalo Rally, Liberal March And Weddings – On The Same Day.

The Washington Post (8/23, Stein) reports that the National Park Service is "preparing for one of its busiest days of the year in the nation's capital next month – a fall day when more than 30 events are expected to coincide, including a pro-Trump rally and a demonstration of Insane Clown Posse fans who have dubbed themselves Juggalos." NPS spokesman Mike Litterst "said the agency is sifting through applications to determine where best to situate each group on Sept. 16." The U.S. Park Police "wouldn't discuss its security plan for the day, but said the agency is prepared to provide security while protecting First Amendment activities on federal property."
