Emergency Management

The Washakie Reservoir in Fort Washakie, Wyoming is currently experiencing large inflows due to significant snowmelt. Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA)-Wind River Irrigation Agency personnel have visited the Washakie Dam the past several days to meet with tribal members. The dam's structural integrity appears to be in satisfactory condition; however, large spillways flows combined with water being released through the dam's gates may cause flooding conditions downstream. One U.S. Geological Survey (USGS) Rain and Early Warning System gaging station is currently being monitored above the Washakie Dam. The current reservoir elevation is approximately 6,355 feet, and roughly 6-inches of water are going over the spillway crest.

The Wind River Tribes, with the assistance of the Tribal Water Engineer's Office, have been preparing for possible flooding. People living in homes that may be impacted have been notified, and sandbags have been filled and distributed across the reservation. The seven day forecast includes rain and thunderstorms which may increase flows into the reservoir. The National Weather Service has issued a Flood Warning for the area until 11:30 a.m. on Wednesday.

While there have been no significant changes to the West Mims fire in Georgia, fire activity could increase over the next couple of days due to the presence of dry fuels and possible thunderstorm activity. Accessibility to the fire remains limited, and portions of the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge remain closed to the public. Full containment is still expected on November 1.

Media of InterestUS Agencies Emphasize Cooperation Entering Wildfire Season.

The AP (6/2, Ridler) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke and Agriculture Secretary Sonny Perdue "signed a memorandum Friday emphasizing cooperation among federal, state, tribal and local agencies in battling wildfires as the main part of the wildfire season arrives." Zinke and Perdue signed the document following a briefing at the National Interagency Fire Center in Boise. the article notes that "the agreement doesn't announce any major changes in firefighting strategy for this year's wildfire season that both secretaries say will be challenging." It says that "the objectives of firefighter safety and public safety remain top priorities, and there's a continued emphasis on a need for efficiency and communication."

Ryan Zinke: Paris Climate Agreement Was Bad For US.

Newsmax (6/2, Fitzgerald) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "has said he does not believe climate change is a hoax, but on Friday he defended President Donald Trump's decision to pull out of the Paris climate agreement, saying the 'deal is bad' for the United States." Zinke said, "It's only 20 pages, but as you read through it, we pay for it. We pay billions of dollars up front, more than anyone else." Moreover, the deal itself "doesn't do anything," Zinke said. "It doesn't move the needle if everyone complies, and we lose jobs. It was a bad deal. If we're going to sit down and have a climate change deal, then let's make it fair."

Ryan Zinke Mulls Protections For Greater Sage Grouse.

The Denver Post (6/4, Finley) reports that Western leaders are "opposing a possible Trump administration push to overhaul federal plans for protecting greater sage grouse across a Texas-sized area in 10 states." Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "last week stayed mum on whether he'll move ahead on a review of the plans." Interior spokeswoman Heather Swift said in a prepared statement, "Secretary Zinke has made clear his commitment to working with, rather than against, local communities and being a good neighbor to private landowners. The Interior Department is looking forward to working with state and local partners to ensure we are striking a true balance between both conservation and responsible multiple use of our public lands."

County To Back Mining On Federal Lands.

7/28/2017

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR Mail - Interior Cabinet Affairs Report for 6/5/17

The Mohave Valley News (AZ) Daily News (6/4, Secker) reports that Mohave County supervisors "will look to approve Monday two letters supporting the opening of public lands to mining," and the board "will look to ask the U.S. Department of Interior to review the 2012 withdrawal of land in the Arizona Strip from uranium mining." The board's letter "to current U.S. Secretary of Interior Ryan Zinke states that uranium mining does not affect ground water or destroy the natural resources of the land. Once completed, the lands returned to its native state, it says." The board "will also look to send a letter to Zinke to remove monument designations."

There's A New Sheriff On The Gulf.

The Houston Chronicle (6/2, Osborne) reported that the new director of the Bureau of Safety and Environmental Enforcement Scott Anger addressed his vision for the agency with reporters on Thursday. Anger said, "The policy of the country is to develop these resources. ... I don't have the luxury of having an agency that's an 'either/or' agency. This agency, it's about safety, it's about environmental sustainability, and it's about energy production. The equation we have is an 'and' equation."

Media TodayUSVI Governor Meets with Interior Officials | Receives Grants for the U.S. Virgin Islands to Study Potential for Food and Agricultural Manufacturing, Improve Water Repair and Distribution Services and Increase Safety in Prisons

WASHINGTON, D.C. (June 7, 2017) – Today Interior Senior White House Advisor Doug Domenech, Acting Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Nikolao Pula and other OIA officials met with U.S. Virgin Islands Governor Kenneth Mapp to discuss issues facing the territory. The Governor's trip coincided with the release of $704,000 in technical and maintenance assistance funding from the Office of Insular Affairs (OIA) which will support the Governor and his administration in several important ways. Funds will be used to explore potential manufacturing and production in food and agricultural products and to save costs and improve the provision of public services in water distribution and maintenance and correctional safety.

Emergency Management

On June 2, an Emergency Action Plan (EAP) Response Level 2 was declared by the Bureau of Reclamation at Anchor Dam, indicating some minor flooding may be experienced in the area. The dam is located on the South Fork of Owl Creek, approximately 40 miles west of Thermopolis, Wyoming. As of June 5, the flow in Owl Creek downstream from the dam was 530 cubic feet per second (cfs), exceeding the trigger for Response Level 2 of 400 cfs. These flows are being generated by runoff from snow-melt on the non-regulated tributaries downstream of the dam. The dam is operating well at this time, and there are no concerns with dam safety.

Due to high inflows into the Bull Lake Reservoir and dam releases exceeding irrigation demands, an EAP Response Level 1 was declared at Bull Lake Dam on June 2. The dam is located on Bull Lake Creek, approximately 40 miles northwest of Riverton, Wyoming. This is the lowest Bureau of Reclamation response level, and does not indicate a risk to downstream population at this time.

Outside Media of InterestUtah Official Named Acting Head Of US Fish And Wildlife.

The AP (6/5, Whitehurst) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Monday "tapped the head of Utah's wildlife management division as deputy director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, a newly created position where the appointee will serve as acting head of the agency until a director is named and confirmed." Utah Division of Wildlife Resources Director Greg Sheehan was "named to the post a month after Zinke visited newly designated Bears Ears National Monument, which was opposed by the Utah Wildlife Board and other Utah leaders." Sheehan "said he didn't speak with Zinke during his visit, and the monument doesn't contain land managed by Fish and Wildlife."

Trump's Interior Secretary Spoke To Oil Trade Group At Trump Hotel.

The Huffington Post (6/5, D'angelo) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke's appearance at a American Petroleum Institute board of directors meeting on March 23 is raising eyebrows. The article says that "the speech was held at Trump International Hotel in Washington, which has been at the center of conflict-of-interest concerns." According to the nonprofit watchdog group Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington, "of all Zinke's meetings with energy industry representatives, the API event was the only one held at a location that financially benefits President Donald Trump."

Cape Cod National Seashore Advisory Commission Reinstated.

The Cape Cod (MA) Times (6/5, List) reports that Rep. William Keating "announced Monday that the Cape Cod National Seashore Advisory Commission has been reinstated after a month-long suspension mandated by the Department of the Interior." Keating sent a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on May 12 "asking that the commission be allowed to continue its regular meetings." The article says that "it is unclear if other commissions that were also subject to the temporary suspension have been reinstated."

Commentary: Trump Should Focus On Priorities, Not Katahdin Monument.

In an op-ed for Central Maine (6/6, Barron), Chris Barron, a conservative strategist in Washington, D.C., and the organizer of LGBT for Trump, writes that the Republican Party has "a long and proud tradition of creating and protecting public lands," but "unfortunately, it's become fashionable in certain Republican circles to push for the dismantling of our federal public lands, a position that is at odds with our party's history." Among the many reasons Barron supports President Trump has been "his willingness to buck the modern GOP establishment and speak out in favor of protecting our public lands." He urges Trump to uphold his promise "to protect and defend our public lands" reject "this unnecessary effort to chip away at our public lands."

Trump Admin Proposes Seismic Surveys For Atlantic Drilling.

The AP (6/5, Daly) reports the Trump Administration is looking to use seismic air guns to look for oil and gas formations underneath the Atlantic Ocean floor. The National Marine Fisheries Service said it is trying to get permits under the Marine Mammal Protection Act for five companies to use the air guns for seismic surveys in the Atlantic. Environmental groups and East Coast lawmakers have opposed the surveys, saying that the air guns can injure marine mammals and harm commercial fishing and tourism. The Hill (6/5, Henry) reports the Southern Environmental Law Center said the testing would "pave the way for offshore drilling, which would be a direct hit to our economy, environment, communities and way of life." Michael Jasny, director of the Marine Mammal Protection Project for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said, "The American people own these Atlantic waters. This is the first step towards drilling them." The Washington Examiner (6/5, Siciliano) reports that the Commerce Department is accepting comments on the proposal for permit authorization for 30 days, but warned that comments submitted to the agency in support of, or opposition to, oil and natural gas drilling will not be accepted. The notice said, "Comments indicating general support for or opposition to hydrocarbon exploration or any comments relating to hydrocarbon development (e.g., leasing, drilling) are not relevant to this request for comments and will not be considered."
