America's best celebration of public lands starts tomorrow

Dear Sally R,

Tomorrow, The 2017 SHIFT Festival kicks off with thoughtleaders from around the country.

From the second annual State Offices of Outdoor Recreation Workshop to SHIFT for the Planet to our celebration of Bears Ears National Monument, Day 1 of this year's SHIFT is a fitting beginning to what's being called "the Davos of conservation".

If you're an advocate for outdoor recreation and public lands, there's no better place to be this week than Jackson, WY.

Help us protect America's public lands. Join us at SHIFT.

WATCH TRIBAL LEADERS PRESENT AMERICA'S NEWEST NATIONAL MONUMENT IN THEIR TERMS

On Wednesday, Nov. 1, Utah Diné Bikéyah tribal leaders Utah Cynthia Wilson, Jonah Yellowman, and Eric Descheenie will present the story of Bears Ears National Monument from their perspective.

The evening promises to be an unprecedented opportunity for audiences to learn about tribal knowledge, sovereignty, and what's at stake in light of President Trump's promise to shrink the monument's boundaries.

To help share their story with a wider audience, we're working with Patagonia to livestream the presentation.
