Emergency Management

On June 2, an Emergency Action Plan (EAP) Response Level 2 was declared by the Bureau of Reclamation at Anchor Dam, indicating some minor flooding may be experienced in the area. The dam is located on the South Fork of Owl Creek, approximately 40 miles west of Thermopolis, Wyoming. As of June 5, the flow in Owl Creek downstream from the dam was 530 cubic feet per second (cfs), exceeding the trigger for Response Level 2 of 400 cfs. These flows are being generated by runoff from snow-melt on the non-regulated tributaries downstream of the dam. The dam is operating well at this time, and there are no concerns with dam safety.

Due to high inflows into the Bull Lake Reservoir and dam releases exceeding irrigation demands, an EAP Response Level 1 was declared at Bull Lake Dam on June 2. The dam is located on Bull Lake Creek, approximately 40 miles northwest of Riverton, Wyoming. This is the lowest Bureau of Reclamation response level, and does not indicate a risk to downstream population at this time.

Outside Media of InterestUtah Official Named Acting Head Of US Fish And Wildlife.

The AP (6/5, Whitehurst) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on Monday “tapped the head of Utah’s wildlife management division as deputy director of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, a newly created position where the appointee will serve as acting head of the agency until a director is named and confirmed.” Utah Division of Wildlife Resources Director Greg Sheehan was “named to the post a month after Zinke visited newly designated Bears Ears National Monument, which was opposed by the Utah Wildlife Board and other Utah leaders.” Sheehan “said he didn’t speak with Zinke during his visit, and the monument doesn’t contain land managed by Fish and Wildlife.”

Trump’s Interior Secretary Spoke To Oil Trade Group At Trump Hotel.

The Huffington Post (6/5, D’angelo) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke’s appearance at a American Petroleum Institute board of directors meeting on March 23 is raising eyebrows. The article says that “the speech was held at Trump International Hotel in Washington, which has been at the center of conflict-of-interest concerns.” According to the nonprofit watchdog group Citizens for Responsibility and Ethics in Washington, “of all Zinke’s meetings with energy industry representatives, the API event was the only one held at a location that financially benefits President Donald Trump.”

Cape Cod National Seashore Advisory Commission Reinstated.

The Cape Cod (MA) Times (6/5, List) reports that Rep. William Keating “announced Monday that the Cape Cod National Seashore Advisory Commission has been reinstated after a month-long suspension mandated by the Department of the Interior.” Keating sent a letter to Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke on May 12 “asking that the commission be allowed to continue its regular meetings.” The article says that “it is unclear if other commissions that were also subject to the temporary suspension have been reinstated.”

Commentary: Trump Should Focus On Priorities, Not Katahdin Monument.

In an op-ed for Central Maine (6/6, Barron), Chris Barron, a conservative strategist in Washington, D.C., and the organizer of LGBT for Trump, writes that the Republican Party has “a long and proud tradition of creating and protecting public lands,” but “unfortunately, it’s become fashionable in certain Republican circles to push for the dismantling of our federal public lands, a position that is at odds with our party’s history.” Among the many reasons Barron supports President Trump has been “his willingness to buck the modern GOP establishment and speak out in favor of protecting our public lands.” He urges Trump to uphold his promise “to protect and defend our public lands” reject “this unnecessary effort to chip away at our public lands.”

Trump Admin Proposes Seismic Surveys For Atlantic Drilling.

The AP (6/5, Daly) reports the Trump Administration is looking to use seismic air guns to look for oil and gas formations underneath the Atlantic Ocean floor. The National Marine Fisheries Service said it is trying to get permits under the Marine Mammal Protection Act for five companies to use the air guns for seismic surveys in the Atlantic. Environmental groups and East Coast lawmakers have opposed the surveys, saying that the air guns can injure marine mammals and harm commercial fishing and tourism. The Hill (6/5, Henry) reports the Southern Environmental Law Center said the testing would “pave the way for offshore drilling, which would be a direct hit to our economy, environment, communities and way of life.” Michael Jasny, director of the Marine Mammal Protection Project for the Natural Resources Defense Council, said, “The American people own these Atlantic waters. This is the first step towards drilling them.” The Washington Examiner (6/5, Siciliano) reports that the Commerce Department is accepting comments on the proposal for permit authorization for 30 days, but warned that comments submitted to the agency in support of, or opposition to, oil and natural gas drilling will not be accepted. The notice said, “Comments indicating general support for or opposition to hydrocarbon exploration or any comments relating to hydrocarbon development (e.g., leasing, drilling) are not relevant to this request for comments and will not be considered.”
