I have also talked to SUWA about the project. I know that State Parks has also had conversations with them. I was told by Neil that they will strongly oppose any efforts to construct bike trails. It sounds like they are okay with the additional camping facilities.

Got it. The State of Utah is taking the lead on the project. They have already hired SWCA. The project lead is the same person I was working with on the SRD MLP.

I should have been a bit more clear this is pending. Not a formal request for approval. I spoke with Gary T, and they had been advised to coordinate with us so consider this background info for a future discussion with the Monticello team, but not until after any formal announcement regarding the monuments is made. Whenever and whatever that might be. We can work out some good advice and counsel in the interim.

I advised Don and Gary to sit tight, and stay tuned. Gary will be sitting tight. They should not make any commitments to the state just yet, but can certainly talk more with them about mutual objectives and site specific proposal options.

Abbie, I'm "formally" asking for permission to proceed with planning on the Cooperative project near Goosenecks State Park.

Here's some background on Goosenecks.

It is located in the original Proclamation area. Ed agreed to proceed with planning (see attached Briefing Paper), but the project was subsequently put on hold because of the Secretary's Monument review.

We and the State would like to proceed with the planning and begin formal public scoping. We assumed that since Secretary has presented the report to the President we could proceed.

So, the question I have been asking is, "Can we move forward with this?". Although I have talked to numerous people informally (Lance, Gary, Anita, and I thought Ed), I haven't made a formal request.
