Interior Secretary Zinke Says He'll Tour Nevada National Monuments In July.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (6/26, Brean) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke "didn't stop at any national monuments during his first official visit to Nevada, but he promised to return for a tour of Gold Butte and Basin and Range before the end of July." During an event in Pahrump on Monday, Zinke "said he wants to see the two Nevada monuments from the ground and talk to stakeholders before he decides whether the designations should be reduced or rescinded." Zinke "said he doesn't have any 'preconceived ideas' about Gold Butte or Basin and Range, though he indicated that his recent recommendations on Bears Ears National Monument in Utah provide a blueprint for what might happen here."
