Hi Randy,

As discussed, see BLM's attached revisions to acreage totals for some of the monuments.

Thanks!

Christina

Christina,

I apologize for the delay in getting back to you. I tried to forward this on Monday via my iPhone, but I don't think I was successful. Hope this answers your questions. If not, please let me know. Thanks for your patience.

Here is what I got back from the program...

BLM does not include non-Federal (State and private) lands in our monument acreage tallies. Only Federal lands count toward the total acreage figures. Therefore, we do not recommend adding the "State and Private lands" column figures to the "Federal lands" column figures.

Additionally, some of these acreage figures differ from those in our current database. Attached please find the table with the updated acreage figures. All changes are in red.

In three cases - Ironwood Forest, Rio Grande del Norte, and Bears Ears - the acreages in the updated table differ slightly from those in the recently produced monument closures table. These minor acreage discrepancies are extremely common and stem from the fact that different offices have different ways of calculating acreages (GIS, land use plans, etc.). Additionally, sometimes units change in size by a few acres, and it takes the WO or the State Office some time to process those changes.

Hi Rich,

I have two follow up questions on the BLM National Monuments response (see attached).

To determine the current total acreage of a monument on the list, do the "number of acres at enactment" (H) column and the "current non-federal acreage" column (J) need to be added together? I wanted to clarify so that a correct tally of total current acres can be determined.

Also, in cases where the current federal acreage has changed (captured in column "i"), I think that we would add this column with "current non-federal acreage" column (J), to tally the total current acres. Is that correct?

Christina
