I had a computer failure and was unable to use it for quite a while, so just getting to your email. I hate to ask this, but could you redo the numbers.

The number of singles seems too high. I went through with my calculator and came up with about 160,000. In almost every set, the duplicates and near duplicates far exceeded the singles.

One possible complicating factor is that I didn't correct the July 20 duplicate and near duplicate numbers on the "comment count" page initially. This time around, use only the 3 attachments here, plus your numbers from the smaller sets of duplicates and near duplicates from the July 20 set of comments.

Great, thanks. We also need the support and oppose numbers. Likely would be easier to add up the support and unc and then subtract from 810,490, but your call on how best to do it. We are still checking on the attachments and the mail received here, so will have additional numbers to add to the totals here.

Also, I will get tomorrow the totals from the postcards, petitions and form letters that were sent here and counted here, so you will have some more adding to do then. I'm waiting to hear from the person who is overseeing the attachment review, but that should give us another very large number, all opposed.

You don't need to re-add previous numbers, just add to the totals you sent me a little while ago the results of your counting of the smaller sets of duplicates and near-duplicates, and everything in the attachment except the 3 numbers with **

The July 20 count I sent you is a prime example of why not to stay late and work on numbers - I omitted all of the duplicates I had counted, and left out the last 2 sets of nds (50-100 and 100-200). The singles and uncodable numbers are correct. The attached screen shot from the DiscoverText bucket list has the full numbers - about another 300,000.

The "12006 + 1828 + 1821" represents the first 3 sets of near duplicates, so that is correct. I marked those on the attachment with . You need to add to the total you have sent me your numbers from your work with the duplicates and near dups, plus all of the numbers in the attachment except those with the . I will come up in minute to make sure I explained this clearly.
