Mike,

Attached is a list of meetings/contacts with State, local, and Tribal governments. I have copied others that have been involved in these communications so they can verify the accuracy of this information. I am least comfortable speaking about our correspondence with the State of Utah. Ed is the best person to answer that question.

Please let me know if you have any questions.

- The BLM has had at least two in-person coordination meetings with the Forest Service and has a weekly coordination call for the past approximately 5 weeks. We are working collaboratively on public information materials and responses to inquiries, which are often addressed to both agencies on an as needed basis.
- The BLM has met once with representatives from the Ute Indian Tribe of the Uintah Ouray, the Zuni Tribe, Ute Mountain Ute, and Navajo Nation. Additionally, BLM cultural resource staff have reached out to each of the Tribes on at least one occasion.
- The BLM has two meetings with San Juan County where Bears Ears National Monument was a topic of discussion. On February 7, 2017, the State Director and local BLM managers met with the San Juan County during a standing coordination meeting. Additionally, on February 28, 2017, Don Hoffheins, BLM Monticello Field Office Manager, met with San Juan County public lands director, Nick Sandberg to provide an update on ongoing actions. Lance Porter, Canyon Country District Manager has also had open communications with the County.
- BLM-Utah State Director Ed Roberson has met with representatives from the State of Utah, including individuals from the Governor's Office and some members of Utah's Congressional Delegation. Specifically Ed Roberson met with Senator Hatch on February 18th. These meetings have covered a range of topics, including Bears Ears National Monument.

Hi Mike,

When I spoke with the staff the afternoon they had follow up questions on the meetings with FS, State, County, and Tribes. Could you please let me know how frequently you've met with each of these groups since the designation?

Thanks much!!
