It saved without a problem - looks like a lot of information.

The BLM folks have been busy - this is from the same office that is providing all the monument information.

Todd,

At Monday's Weekly Assistant Secretaries meeting with Jim Cason you requested information a link to reports that BLM prepared and submitted to Congress concerning Wilderness Areas in various states. I requested that information. It took BLM a bit longer than anticipated gather the various state-by-state reports. The email below includes a link that takes you to a Googledocs site. If you attempt to download a file for a particular state and there is no document in the file, BLM explained that is because they do not have a report for that particular state. Please note there is a spreadsheet in the googledocs site that displays which states have reports. Hope this helps.

Rich

Wonderful work Rachel!

Rich please see the results of your request and don't hesitate to ask questions if something is not clear.

Hi Chris,

We have compiled all of the files available to us pertaining to the Assistant Secretary's request. These reports were a part of a 15 year analysis conducted by BLM that includes a recommendation to Congress related to the suitability of Wilderness Study Areas for designation by Congress. We think it is important to note that the the conditions on the ground may have changed since this report was completed. We have also included the initial inventories, where applicable. For additional information, use the attached briefing paper and associated excel document (information found in the Excel document will be updated as information becomes available in the google drive).

Please access the files using this link: (b) (5) DPP

We are in the process of digitizing and compiling our Wilderness Study Reports. They should be available from the BLM library and on the BLM website soon. We do not have some of the records at the Washington Office, but working with the state offices to locate them. We should have them located and digitized in about a month.

Best,

Rachel
