This would require NPS issuance of a right-of-way permit to the Governor's Office of Emergency Services (Cal OES). Cal OES will hold public meetings in Arcata on January 10 and in Klamath on January 11. The 45-day public comment period ends January 29, 2018.

- December 15 (tent): Local NPS Release: Golden Gate National Recreation Area will complete the Record of Decision for the Alcatraz Ferry Embarkation Plan/Environmental Impact Statement. #### U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service

- December 15 (tent): Local FWS Release: FWS plans to publish in the Federal Register a draft 10-year General Conservation Plan (GCP) for Utah prairie dogs. Conservation plans such as the Utah prairie dog GCP are developed to allow for incidental take permit authorization for species listed under the ESA. The overall goal of the Utah prairie dog GCP is to reconcile prairie dog conservation with the development needs of local communities in southwest and southcentral Utah, and compensate for impacts to Utah prairie dogs.
- December 15 (tent.): Local FWS Release: FWS plans to send to the Federal Register a proposed listing determination for the Yangtze sturgeon, located in China. While there is no expected opposition to this determination, aquacultural businesses and countries including China may be concerned that the potential listing of this species will have an impact on other species that are traded internationally, such as the Amur sturgeon.
- December 19: National Joint Release: FWS, NOAA and New York State Department of Environmental Conservation (the Hudson River Natural Resource Trustees) will release an injury determination report that concludes PCBs released by General Electric have caused repeated and prolonged exceedances of state and federal water quality standards and contaminated surface water resources of the Hudson River for decades. The report is the latest demonstration of the Trustees' measurement of natural resource injuries from General Electric's release of PCBs to the Hudson River from its manufacturing facilities in Hudson Falls and Fort Edward, New York. The Trustees are planning coordinated outreach through a joint news release and Congressional notifications.

EMERGENCY MANAGEMENT

Interagency Hurricane response and recovery efforts:

OEPC, USFWS, and NPS continue to coordinate efforts with the U.S. Coast Guard (USCG) to assess the removal and salvage of displaced vessels throughout the U.S. Virgin Islands, Puerto Rico, and Florida. USFWS personnel are providing best practices and technical assistance in Puerto Rico and the U.S. Virgin Islands, while NPS is providing archaeological resource monitoring services for certain vessels in Florida.

An interagency team consisting of personnel from the NPS, the National Archives and Records Administration, the Smithsonian, and the Centers for Disease Control and Prevention have deployed under a FEMA Mission Assignment to provide assistance to the Institute of Puerto Rican Culture and General Archives. This mission is expected to be completed by December 16.

Under a FEMA Mission Assignment and through coordination with OEPC and the Advisory Council on Historic Preservation, a six-person NPS team (comprised of archaeologists and historic structure specialists) continues to assist the State Historic Preservation Office of Puerto Rico with damage assessments and is providing technical assistance on National Register Properties eligible for the National Register. This mission is expected to continue until December 23.

Three OEPC Field Coordinators (1 in Texas, 2 in Florida) have completed Mission Scoping Assessments for both states and draft recovery strategies have been completed for Texas. NPS has provided two additional personnel to support OEPC efforts in Texas. Field Coordinators are also deployed to Puerto Rico (1 OEPC, 1 USFWS) and the U.S. Virgin Islands (1 OEPC, 1 NPS). Their efforts are currently focused on developing recovery strategies for both territories. OEPC Field Coordinators are also working with NPS and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration to investigate damage to coral reef sites.

DOI has 23 employees supporting the Small Business Administration (SBA). The group is comprised of volunteers from BIA, BLM, BOEM, BOR, USFWS, IBC, NPS, ONRR, and USGS. The Office of Emergency Management is working with the SBA to deploy additional personnel as needed.

Internal bureau and office-specific Hurricane response and recovery activities:

Effective December 12, commercial power was restored to the USGS Caribbean-Florida Water Science Center in Guaynabo, Puerto Rico. This ended an almost 90-day stretch without commercial power that began with the landfall of Hurricane Maria on September 20. USGS continues to work with GSA to assess long-term impacts to the facility.

Wildfire Activity – California:

A CAL Fire Engineer from the San Diego Unit was fatally injured yesterday on the Thomas Fire. The details of the incident are still under review and additional information will be provided as they are verified. The Thomas Fire (being managed by CAL Fire) in southern California has burned approximately 249,500 (+11,000) acres and is 35-percent (+5) contained. The fire is being managed by a Type-1 Incident Management Team (IMT) with 8,316 (+233) personnel assigned, including 177 (+17) DOI personnel. The fire continues to threaten multiple critical habitats in the area and is burning on some BLM land parcels. USBR reports that fire activity has surrounded the Lake Casitas Dam and Reservoir, which is operated by a non-USBR entity. Red Flag Warnings for portions of Ventura and Los Angeles counties are set to expire this morning; however, Santa Ana winds are in the forecast over the weekend and the potential for extreme fire behavior will remain. Full containment of this fire has been pushed back from December 24 to January 7.

USGS is coordinating with FEMA, other federal partners, and state agencies on post-fire data collection and assessments. They do not have any impacts to their facilities, stream gages, or field instruments in the area to report at this time.

OUTSIDE MEDIA OF INTEREST (new)

Thousands Of Interior Dept. Employees Report Harassment And Intimidation At Work.

The New York Times (12/14, Cochrane) reports that around 35 percent of 30,000 Interior Department employees who responded to a recent department-wide survey “reported that they had experienced harassment or intimidation at work.” Over “85 percent of those employees said they had to continue to interact with the person responsible for the mistreatment.” Additionally, “8 percent of employees reported sexual harassment, 20 percent reported negative treatment based on their age and 16 percent based on their sex.”

The AP (12/14, DALY, BROWN) reports that “the Bureau of Indian Affairs and National Park Service reported the most incidents, with 40 percent of BIA workers and 39 percent of parks workers reporting some form of harassment.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said in a statement Thursday he has “zero tolerance for any type of workplace harassment,” adding that he has directed agency heads to move quickly “to improve accountability and transparency with regard to this absolutely intolerable behavior.”

CNN (12/14, Green) reports that “Zinke said that he has already fired ‘a number of predators,’ actions he said previous administrations were too scared to take.” He said, “From day one, I made it clear that I have zero tolerance for any type of workplace harassment, and I have directed leadership across the entire Department to move rapidly to improve accountability and transparency with regard to this absolutely intolerable behavior. All employees have the right to work in a safe and harassment-free environment. I've already fired a number of predators who other administrations were too afraid to remove or just turned a blind eye to. Under my leadership we don't protect predators. When I say 'zero tolerance' I mean that these people will be held accountable for their abhorrent actions."

The Hill (12/14, Cama) reports that Deputy Interior Secretary David Bernhardt "also blamed the Obama administration for not taking care of the problem." Bernhardt said in a statement, "The previous administration failed to aggressively address these problems and it shows. The culture across the department will change." Bernhardt "asked each bureau within the department to submit plans within 45 days to address the findings, Interior said."

Conservation Group Launches $1M Ad Campaign Hitting Trump Monument Decision.

The Hill (12/14, Henry) reported that the "conservation group" Western Values Project "is launching a $1 million television and radio advertisement campaign targeting three House Republicans over President Trump's decision to shrink monument protections in Utah." The spots target "Reps. Greg Walden (R-Ore.), Jaime Herrera Beutler (R-Wash.) and Martha McSally (R-Ariz.). The ads tell viewers about Trump's executive order shrinking the Bears Ears and Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monuments in Utah, and highlights potential public land policy changes in the three states it is set to air in. The group calls on viewers to tell "the GOP lawmakers "to 'stop the attacks on public lands because your American birthright is not for sale.'"

Bennet Backs BLM Move To Western State.

The Grand Junction (CO) Daily Sentinel (12/14, Harmon) reports that "moving the Bureau of Land Management headquarters out of Washington, D.C., has the conditional support" of Sen.. Michael Bennet. His office said in a statement that Bennet could support any move out of DC "as long as the move is more than symbolic and includes resources to better manage our public lands."

Dam Construction Bill Puts Washington Senator In Tough Spot.

Bloomberg BNA (12/14, Schultz) reports that House Republicans are pushing "a years-in-the-making bill that would speed up federal approvals of dam projects in the West," and, "in doing so, they could also force Pacific Northwest Democrats into a tough spot." According to the article, "for years, Republicans have been trying to pass legislation that would put a cap on the amount of money and time the Bureau of Reclamation can spend studying the environmental impact of proposed dam projects." However, "these bills have always been thwarted in the Senate by a united Democratic opposition, led primarily by Sen. Maria Cantwell (D-Wash.)." This time, however, the legislation's "backers have a trick up their sleeve: They've added a measure to the legislation that would give the green light to a $737 million water resources project in Cantwell's home state, a project she's been championing for years." But "Cantwell said the Republicans' tactics won't work on her."

Here's What Oil Drilling Looks Like In The Arctic Refuge, 30 Years Later.

The New York Times (12/15, Fountain) reports that "satellite images of a small part of the Arctic National Wildlife Refuge show the site of what, so far, is the only oil well ever drilled in the refuge, an exploratory well known as KIC-1 that was completed in the mid-1980s." The well was "plugged and abandoned, and the drilling equipment and a special timber pad it sat on have long since been removed," but "even after three decades, the well's footprint — about 600 feet long on its longest side — is easily distinguishable from the undisturbed tundra around it." The drillers "took care to protect the tundra,” but “KIC-1 shows how even when care is taken, the delicate landscape of northern Alaska can be damaged by drilling activities, and that the damage can persist.”

US And Canada Struggle With Status Of Grizzly Bears.

Courthouse News (12/14, Lundquist) reports that “at its year-end meeting this week, the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee reviewed the status of six Northwestern grizzly bear populations and discussed what’s needed for the species to recover over the next five years.” The binational committee “recently oversaw the process of delisting the Yellowstone subpopulation of grizzly bears after the population had reached the goals of 500 bears total and 48 females with cubs.” Grizzly Bear Study Team ecologist Frank Van Manen was “fairly confident Wednesday that the Yellowstone population was doing fine, estimating that the population has grown to 718 grizzlies bears, including 57 females with cubs.”

Wolf Decision Could Undermine Plan To Remove Grizzly Bears From Endangered List. The Helena (MT) Independent Record (12/14, Chaney) reports that “an appeals court ruling in a federal lawsuit challenging how the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service removed Great Lakes gray wolves from the Endangered Species Act list could unravel plans to delist grizzlies in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem.” FWS grizzly recovery coordinator Hillary Cooley said during a meeting of the Interagency Grizzly Bear Committee in Missoula on Tuesday, “We had put our final delisting rule out in July and within a week we got the court opinion. The Great Lakes wolves were listed for the entire Lower 48 states, and then they carved out a DPS (Distinct Population Segment) and tried to delist them. That’s what we’ve done with the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem, as well, so we thought we should take a look.”

U.S. Fish And Wildlife Service Requests Public Comment On Yellowstone Grizzly Delisting. Wyoming Public Radio (12/14, Kudelska) reports that “federal officials are reviewing the June decision to take grizzly bears in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem off the endangered species list.” The FWS will “review how the delisting of grizzlies in the Greater Yellowstone Ecosystem could affect the bear’s population in its historical range throughout the lower 48.”

Palau Compact Renewed But Awaits Funding Approval.

The Guam Daily Post (12/14) reports that “after years of delay, the Compact agreement between Palau and the United States has finally been renewed, but approval of the funds promised in the agreement is still pending.” The Palau Compact was included in the 2018 National Defense Authorization Act that President Trump signed into law Wednesday in Washington. Assistant Secretary for Insular Areas Doug Domenech said, “Finalization of this agreement with Palau is long overdue. We look forward to final action from Congress to provide the appropriations necessary to finalize this important U.S. government commitment to Palau.” Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “underscored the need to approve the funding, saying, ‘it’s an important element of the Pacific national security strategy to maintain stability in the Western Pacific Region.’”

I. STATEMENT OF PURPOSE

Jefferson Keel, the newly-elected President of the National Congress of American Indians (NCAI), has requested an opportunity to introduce himself to the Secretary and raise a few issues that are priorities for him and the organization he represents.

II. PARTICIPANTS

- Jefferson Keel, President of NCAI and Lieutenant Governor of the Chickasaw Nation
- Jacqueline Pata, Executive Director of NCAI
- Denise Desiderio, Policy Director, NCAI

III. BACKGROUND

NCAI is the oldest, largest and most representative American Indian and Alaska Native tribal government organization in the country. They are recipients of numerous federal grants, and are actively consulted on range of issues impacting Indian Country. We expect Lt. Gov. Keel to focus on three issues: Self-Governance, Land-to-Trust, and the streamlining of law enforcement funding.

IV. DISCUSSION

A. Biography of Lt. Gov. Keel

Jefferson Keel is serving his fifth term as Lieutenant Governor of the Chickasaw Nation of Oklahoma. He was elected the 22nd President of NCAI in October 2017, a position he previously held from 2010-2013. Lt. Gov. Keel has served on a number of national boards and committees, including Congressionally-established Indian Law and Order Commission, the Department of the Interior's Tribal-Interior Budget Council, the Department of Health and Human Services' Secretary's Tribal Advisory Committee, and the Department of Justice's Tribal Justice Advisory Group.

Lt. Gov. Keel retired from the U.S. Army in 1989 as a Captain (prior enlisted) and is a combat veteran with service in Vietnam. Lt. Gov. Keel's awards include a Bronze Star with "V" device and a Purple Heart for wounds sustained during the Tet offensive. Lt. Gov. Keel's nephew, Benjamin Keel, was on the Trump Administration's landing team at the Department of the Interior and is currently serving as a political appointee in the Department of Agriculture.

B. Chickasaw Nation

The Chickasaw Nation is located in southern Oklahoma, with homelands originally in western Tennessee and northern Mississippi. The Tribe currently has 50,000 enrolled members and operates a number of tribal enterprises, which include over 20 gaming facilities.

C. Self-Governance

Self-Governance is a significant component of how the BIA now meets the needs of Indian Country. Essentially, the tribes provide services the BIA would otherwise provide, and utilize the BIA budget to accomplish a more efficient and effective operation of the programs at the local level. 2018 will be the 30th anniversary of the enactment of the Self Governance Act, and IA is planning to commemorate that occasion with an effort to re-invigorate the program, which was left moribund by the prior administration.

Of note, the Chickasaw Nation has almost completely taken over the BIA programs (and IHS programs) on their reservation through Self Governance. They are a notable success of the program.

D. Land-to-Trust

Potential Off-Reservation Fee-to-Trust Regulation Revisions: Acting AS-AI Tahsuda recently issued a Dear Tribal Leader letter announcing a new schedule for consultations to discuss potential changes to the fee-to-trust regulations, to occur in January and February 2018. Indian Affairs (IA) had initially issued a letter and scheduled consultations on a "Consultation Draft" of revisions. Based on input received at the listening session we had at NCAI's conference in October, IA took a step back to reassess that Consultation Draft and instead focus on consulting on broader questions posed in the December Dear Tribal Leader Letter about what Tribes believe is the most appropriate criteria, process, and program goals for taking land into trust. Those consultations will take place over January and February of 2018. IA looks forward to input from NCAI and its member Tribes on those questions.

On-Reservation Fee-to-Trust Regulations: IA has not proposed any changes to the on-reservation Fee-to-Trust regulations. In fact, IA has taken steps to publicly discuss the Secretary's support for tribal land acquisitions within reservations as a critically important policy for economic development, new housing, and health care facilities.

New Ideas on Indian Lands: As an alternative to Land-in-Trust, Congressman Don Young has introduced an alternative of Indian "fee" lands to reduce federal regulatory burdens. IA has testified in support of this idea, as a voluntary alternative to Land-in-Trust.

E. Reorganization of the Department

Reorganization of the Department of the Interior: IA held several listening sessions on behalf of the Department to obtain Tribes' input on President Trump's Executive Order 13871 on reorganizing the Executive Branch of the U.S. Government. AS-IA invited Tribes to the listening sessions by Dear Tribal Leader letter dated May 16, 2017. The sessions were identified as “listening sessions” rather than formal consultation sessions because of the short timeframe (less than 30 days) before several of the scheduled sessions and because Interior did not yet have a proposed reorganization plan on which to consult. A total of 265 Tribal representatives attended the seven listening sessions, and we received 28 written comment submissions addressing: the consultation process, the goals of reorganization, implementation of reorganization, funding, agency structure, BIA, OST, BIE, Regional/Agency offices, streamlining NEPA, and other miscellaneous topics. We are currently reviewing those comments and working with the Department to schedule a round of formal Tribal consultations once a draft proposal is prepared.

Status of the Office of the Special Trustee of American Indians (OST): The Department recently held two Tribal consultations by teleconference on the potential for moving OST's functions under the Assistant Secretary - Indian Affairs (it is currently housed directly under the Secretary of the Interior). Additionally, the OST's appraisal function is being moved to the Office of Valuation Services (OVS) in the Department, in accordance with the Indian Trust Asset Reform Act (ITARA). Because these activities fall under ITARA, they are currently being handled independently of the rest of the reorganization effort.

F. Streamline Public Safety Funding Mechanisms

Currently, base funding for tribal courts, law enforcement, and detention is provided through the BIA. Additional funding is provided through the Departments of Justice and Health and Human Services under a series of competitive grants. Moreover funding for prevention, rehabilitation, and treatment programs are located at IHS, SAMHSA, and elsewhere within the Dept. of Health and Human Services. These ad hoc systems of year-to-year funding from BIA, but annual competitive grants from the other agencies significantly complicate tribes' efforts to establish comprehensive public safety agencies. The tribes would like the Administration to consult with tribes to develop a proposal what would streamline tribal public safety funding into a single funding vehicle that would be negotiated on an annual basis and made more flexible to meet local needs. They believe DOI should take the lead on this effort.

V. TALKING POINTS/REMARK

Sovereignty mean something!

SOI strongly supports the Self Governance policy and its program application, as local control and decision making leads to more efficient and effective service delivery.

SOI strongly supports tribal control of land use as the most effective way to improve reservation economics and healthy communities.

Effective tribal public safety is the best way to insure safe and healthy tribal communities.

DOI is committed to tribal consultation as one effective way to meet DOI's government to government responsibilities.
