POLICY

NAVAJO GENERATING STATION: The Navajo Nation Council on Monday approved a new $350 million lease for the coal plant near Page that could allow it to remain open another two years. Salt River Project, Arizona Public Service Co., Tucson Electric Power and NV Energy agreed to run the Navajo Generating Station through 2019 if the tribe approved a new lease by July 1. Otherwise, the utilities have said they will close the facility because it is more economical to buy power from natural-gas plants.

Biggest Coal Plant In U.S. West May Get Another 2 Years To Live.

Bloomberg News (6/26, Chediak, Traywick) reports the Navajo generating station “may live to see another two years.” Navajo Nation leaders on Monday “agreed to a deal with the plant’s utility owners that, as originally proposed, could keep the ailing, 2,250-megawatt complex online through December 2019.” The deal “would buy the tribe more time to try to attract new owners who are willing to preserve jobs both at the plant on reservation land and the coal mine that supplies it – and to keep critical revenue flowing into the tribe’s coffers.”

The AP (6/27) reports the extension “means at least 700 jobs at the Navajo Generating Station near Page and the coal mine that supplies it won’t be immediately lost.” The owners of the plant “announced in February they would close it because cheaper power from natural gas is readily available, and they told the Council Monday they’d shut it down this year if they didn’t get an extension.” The plant’s owners “said it will take about two years to tear down the massive plant.”

Additional coverage was provided by the Daily Caller (6/27, Bastasch) and the Phoenix (AZ) Business Journal (6/27, Sunnucks).

EARLY HEADS UP: PRESIDENT’S DONATION TO THE NPS

On July 5, the Secretary will participate in a grant announcement. The purpose of the event is two-fold: (1) to announce $7.2 million in American Battlefield Land Grants for protection of battlefield land at 20 Revolutionary War, War of 1812, and Civil War sites in 9 states; and

(2) to announce that Antietam National Battlefield will benefit from President Donald Trump’s donation of $78,000 for battlefield park maintenance, with his money matched by the Civil War Trust, the National Park Foundation, and the Save Historic Antietam Foundation.

The Brianhead Fire in Utah has burned 49,626 (+6,190) acres and is 10 (+1)-percent contained. The fire is being managed by a Type-1 Incident Management Team with 1,605 (+178) personnel assigned, 394 (+95) of which are DOI personnel. There are currently 1,562 (no change) evacuees and 1,115 (no change) residential structures threatened. There have been 15 (no change) responder injuries reported to date. Full containment is expected on July 15. A Red Flag Warning is in effect in the fire area today, signaling potential continued growth.

The Cole Creek Fire, which is 4,500 (+2,000) acres in Elko County, Nevada, is currently burning in Sage Grouse Habitat. The fire is being managed by Type-3 Incident Management Teams, with 257 (+141) personnel, including 33 (no change) DOI personnel. Full containment of this fire is expected July 3.

Three DOI fires, the Horse Cross Fire (Oregon), Beet Dump Fire (Idaho), and Lock Fire (Idaho) were all contained overnight.

Outside Media of Interest

Zinke Vows To Expand Energy Development.

The Daily Inter Lake (MT) (6/27, Wilson) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “returned to his hometown of Whitefish on Tuesday, emphasizing energy development and what he described as his department’s effort to reverse a ‘breach of trust’ by federal land-management agencies in a keynote speech to the Western Governors’ Association.”

Utah Lawsuits To Test President’s Power To Shrink Monuments.

The AP (6/27, PRICE) reports that “Native American tribes and environmental groups preparing for a legal battle to stop President Donald Trump from dismantling” the Bears Ears National Monument “face a tougher challenge than anticipated.” Republican officials in the state who oppose the monument “asked Trump to rescind the designation.” But Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke “recommended the monument be downsized instead, noting past presidents have tinkered with the boundaries of lands protected under federal law.”

Reid Duke Makes Strong Impression At Golden Knights’ Camp.

The Las Vegas Review-Journal (6/27, Schoen, Gordon) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke addressed the NHL expansion team Vegas Golden Knights’ “young players before camp and shared some of his stories about serving in the military.” Knights owner Bill Foley and Zinke “have been friends for about 10 years.” Foley said, “He did a great job. He talked about duty, and about never giving up, always advancing and going forward. (The players) loved it. It resonated with them. It’s all part of the Knight culture. The warrior class.”

Bill Advancing Alaska’s Long-awaited King Cove Road Clears House Committee.

The Washington Times (6/27, Wolfgang) reports that Congress “appears to have worked out a solution to a long-running fight between Washington and Alaska, proposing a land swap that would give the federal government tens of thousands of acres of land while the state would finally gain control over a small strip of environmentally sensitive wilderness through which Alaska wants to build a road.” On Tuesday, the House Natural Resources Committee “green-lighted a bill authorizing the massive land swap, which would transfer more than 43,000 acres of Alaskan land to the Department of the Interior in exchange for about 200 acres of land in the Izembek in order to build the road.” The bill “passed by a vote of 23 to 14 and now heads to the full House, where it’s expected to pass.”

Support Grows For Thinning Trees To Combat Forest Fires As Wildfires Scorch West.

The Washington Times (6/27, Richardson) reports that “with wildfires already raging through the West, House Republicans took a chainsaw Tuesday to federal regulations that have created a fire-friendly environment on public lands by slowing forest-thinning and dead-tree removal.” The House Natural Resources Committee passed the Resilient Federal Forests Act of 2017, “moving to combat the rise in catastrophic wildfires by reversing what sponsors described as the Forest Service and Bureau of Land Management’s ‘anemic forest management efforts.’” The legislation, H.R. 2936, “comes with support growing for tree-cutting to reduce wildfire risk after years of opposition from environmental groups.”

Oil, Gas Lease Sale In Wyoming Nets $2.6 Million.

The AP (6/27) reports that on Thursday, operators paid a total of $2.6 million in bids for Wyoming land, with the Bureau of Land Management offering 26 parcels in five southern counties, with about half of the proceeds going to the federal government.

Arizonan Tapped To Lead Bureau Of Reclamation.

KJZZ-FM Phoenix (6/27, Dale) reports that the Trump Administration has tapped Brenda Burman to serve as commissioner of the Bureau of Reclamation. Burman is currently the director of Water Strategy at the Salt River Project. If confirmed, “this would be Burman’s second stint at the bureau.” She previously served as deputy commissioner in the George W. Bush administration.

Domenech Nominated For Insular Affairs Post With Influence Over Guam.

The Pacific (GUM) Daily News (6/28, Raymundo) reports that the Interior Department announced Wednesday that President Trump will nominate Douglas Domenech as assistant secretary for insular affairs at Interior. E&E Daily (6/27, Jacobs) reports that the Domenech, a “Bush-era Interior official, led Trump’s transition team at the agency.”
