Interior Announces 18 New Hires (I am copying the full release below.)

(WASHINGTON) Today the Department of the Interior announced the addition of 18 individuals to lead and assist the Department during the Trump administration. Hires include key positions including the Chief of Staff to the Secretary, Associate Deputy Secretary, Principal Deputy Solicitor, and two Principal Deputy Assistant Secretaries among others.

"I'm incredibly honored to have so many experienced, capable and energetic individuals on the team at Interior," said Secretary Ryan Zinke. "Whether on a football team, SEAL team, or the Department of the Interior team, I've always said, everyone's job is just as mission-critical as my own in order for the team to operate at it's full potential. Together we will work toward modernizing the department and delivering better services and experiences to the taxpayer while cutting costs and protecting our most treasured places. I'm excited to continue the work we've already started."

Office of the Secretary:

Scott Hommel - Chief of Staff to the Secretary

Scott Hommel is a decorated Marine veteran who served in the Gulf War. He has two decades of experience in state and federal government as well as work on behalf of military organizations like the National Guard Association of the United States. Most recently, Mr. Hommel served as then-Congressman Zinke's Chief of Staff in the House.

Lori Mashburn - White House Liaison

Lori Mashburn brings with her more than a decade of experience in coalition and team building, business management, and academia. Prior to joining the Trump Administration, Ms. Mashburn helped lead the coalition relations office at the national think tank, The Heritage Foundation. Situational Awareness for the Weekend

The National Capital Region will host multiple events for Memorial Day weekend from 26 to 29 May. The largest gatherings include the Rolling Thunder Ride for Freedom, the Memorial Day

Concert, and the National Memorial Day Parade. Rolling Thunder's Thunder Alley and the Memorial Day Parade were assigned Special Event Assessment Ratings.

Rolling Thunder activities are expected to attract approximately 900,000 participants. The Blessing of the Bikes at the National Cathedral starts the weekend's activities at 1700 ET, 26 May. The Ride for Freedom will begin at 1200 ET, 28 May in the parking lots at the Pentagon, proceed along the National Mall, and conclude at West Potomac Park. Thunder Alley, where merchandise and food vendors will be set up, will be open from 27 to 29 May at 22d St and Constitution Ave NW.

The Memorial Day Concert, on the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol, is expected to attract approximately 300,000 attendees to the National Mall area and will begin at 2000 ET, 28 May. Multiple wreath laying ceremonies are scheduled throughout the weekend at various sites. The National Memorial Day Parade, beginning at 1400 ET, 29 May at the corner of Constitution Ave NW and 7th St NW, will proceed past the White House and end at 17th St NW. The parade is the largest of its kind in the U.S. with an expected crowd of 250,000 attendees.

Numerous street closures are in effect throughout the weekend. The National Weather Service forecast for Memorial Day weekend is for mostly cloudy conditions with up to a 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms each afternoon. High temperatures will be in the upper 70s with light winds.

Emergency Management

Damage assessments at the Fort Pulaski National Monument continued yesterday following the severe weather that caused damage to portions of the park on May 23. The park will likely remain closed through the weekend, as debris removal and structural repairs continue. An Incident Management Team has been established. On May 24, the National Weather Service (NWS) sent personnel to the park to observe the damage caused by the storm. Based on their initial ground observations, the damage was likely caused by an EF1 tornado, but this has not yet been confirmed. The NPS reports that 3 structures were impacted by the severe weather, including the park's restroom facilities, visitor's center, and the fort itself.

Over the past few weeks, the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and the Tribal Assistance Coordination Group (TAC-G) have been assisting Tribes in Nevada prepare for potential flooding as a result of the excessive mountain snowpack. Due to warmer weather in the region, the excessive snowmelt may impact area rivers and waterways, threatening the lives and property of Tribal members, as well as roads, bridges, emergency response capabilities, and Tribal infrastructure. BIA and the TAC-G have worked together on efforts in the northern Nevada area to provide disaster response planning and pre-flood technical assistance to the Yerington Paiute, Walker River Paiute, and Fallon/Shoshone Paiute Tribes. Each Tribe is threatened with moderate to major flooding, as predicted by forecast and weather modeling.

In Georgia, the West Mims Fire in the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge has burned 152,478 (no change) acres. The fire is 65-percent (no change) contained and managed by a Type-1 Incident Management Team with 777 (-15) personnel, including 119 (-9) DOI personnel. There have been 6 (no change) responder injuries reported, and portions of the refuge remain closed to the public. A drying trend commenced yesterday, as the weather system that brought widespread rainfall across Wednesday moved east of the fire area. The containment date is November 1.

Top House, Senate Dems Ask Interior Not To Eliminate National Monuments.

The Hill (5/25, Manchester) reports that “top Democrats in the House and Senate urged Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke in a letter Thursday to not eliminate national monuments, warning that many national monuments across the country currently ‘face an unprecedented threat.’” The Democrats said in the letter, “We are deeply troubled by the president’s April 26 executive order establishing a process that could lead to the diminishment or outright repeal of national monuments designated by his predecessors.” The Democrats wrote, “It is unconscionable to think that this administration would sell out America’s outdoor heritage to benefit corporate interests in the oil, gas, and mining industries.”

Secretary Zinke Headed To National Congress Of American Indians In June.

The Nation Sun News (5/25) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will “address the mid-year conference of the National Congress of American Indians” next month. Zinke said in a press release on Thursday, “It is a great honor to accept the invitation to speak at NCAI’s Mid Year Conference. This will give tribal leaders and I an opportunity to discuss ways to empower the front lines of tribal communities. I am a supporter of building a stronger government-to-government relationship that will reaffirm tribal sovereignty, self-determination and self-governance in Indian Country.”

Tribes Bash Proposed Trump Budget Cuts To Native Americans.

The AP (5/25, Flaccus) reports that “dozens of Native American tribes in six Western states expressed outrage Thursday at President Trump’s proposed budget cuts to American Indian programs, saying they would erase significant progress on child welfare and climate change and gut social services and education on reservations across the U.S.” According to the article, “members from tribes in Oregon, Washington, California, Montana, Idaho and Alaska called on Congress to restore funding to tribes during budget negotiations.” They claimed that “the cuts ignore the treaty responsibilities to federally recognized tribes...and put a stranglehold on programs that have been chronically underfunded.”

Deepwater, US Wind Accept Maryland Terms For Offshore Wind Farms.

The Baltimore Sun (5/25, Dance) reports that “the developers of two wind farms planned off the coast of Ocean City are moving forward with their projects, accepting terms Maryland regulators laid out earlier this month in allowing them to collect subsidies from the state’s electricity customers.” The Sun adds, “Deepwater Wind and U.S. Wind have both notified the Public Service Commission that they have agreed to invest a collective $115 million in manufacturing facilities and port upgrades around Sparrows Point in southeastern Baltimore County, and to contribute $6 million to a state offshore wind business development fund.” The article also states that “the decisions mean Maryland is one step closer to being home to what would be the nation’s second – and by far its largest – array of offshore wind turbines.”

Enviros Add Endangered Species Claim To Keystone Suit.

Law360 (5/25, Sieniuc) reports that “environmental organizations on Wednesday added new claims against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in their suit against the U.S. Department of State and other agencies over the approval of the Keystone XL pipeline, telling a Montana federal court the service hasn’t seriously considered the project’s threat to whooping cranes and other endangered species.” According to the article, “in an amended complaint adding the FWS to the dispute, the environmental groups alleged the service’s finding that the pipeline would not likely harm certain endangered and threatened species.”

Time To Fix Our National Parks.

For the “Congress” blog of The Hill (5/25, Pierno, Contributor), Theresa Pierno, President and CEO of the National Parks Conservation Association, writes that “national parks are more popular than ever, welcoming a record-breaking 331 million visitors last year, and they pump more than $18 billion into local economies across the country.” However, “despite their enormous popularity and importance to our nation, our parks face many challenges, including $11.3 billion in needed repairs.” Pierno urges support for the National Park Service Legacy Act, “the House companion to an identical Senate bill introduced by Sens .Mark Warner (D-Va.) and Rob Portman (R-Ohio) earlier this year,” which “would allocate up to $500 million annually, through 2047, to the Park Service from existing revenues the government receives for oil and natural gas royalties.”

Situational Awareness for the Weekend

The National Capital Region will host multiple events for Memorial Day weekend from 26 to 29 May. The largest gatherings include the Rolling Thunder Ride for Freedom, the Memorial Day Concert, and the National Memorial Day Parade. Rolling Thunder's Thunder Alley and the Memorial Day Parade were assigned Special Event Assessment Ratings.

Rolling Thunder activities are expected to attract approximately 900,000 participants. The Blessing of the Bikes at the National Cathedral starts the weekend's activities at 1700 ET, 26 May. The Ride for Freedom will begin at 1200 ET, 28 May in the parking lots at the Pentagon, proceed along the National Mall, and conclude at West Potomac Park. Thunder Alley, where merchandise and food vendors will be set up, will be open from 27 to 29 May at 22d St and Constitution Ave NW.

The Memorial Day Concert, on the West Lawn of the U.S. Capitol, is expected to attract approximately 300,000 attendees to the National Mall area and will begin at 2000 ET, 28 May. Multiple wreath laying ceremonies are scheduled throughout the weekend at various sites. The National Memorial Day Parade, beginning at 1400 ET, 29 May at the corner of Constitution Ave NW and 7th St NW, will proceed past the White House and end at 17th St NW. The parade is the largest of its kind in the U.S. with an expected crowd of 250,000 attendees.

Numerous street closures are in effect throughout the weekend. The National Weather Service forecast for Memorial Day weekend is for mostly cloudy conditions with up to a 50 percent chance of showers and thunderstorms each afternoon. High temperatures will be in the upper 70s with light winds.

Emergency Management

Damage assessments at the Fort Pulaski National Monument continued yesterday following the severe weather that caused damage to portions of the park on May 23. The park will likely remain closed through the weekend, as debris removal and structural repairs continue. An Incident Management Team has been established. On May 24, the National Weather Service (NWS) sent personnel to the park to observe the damage caused by the storm. Based on their initial ground observations, the damage was likely caused by an EF1 tornado, but this has not yet been confirmed. The NPS reports that 3 structures were impacted by the severe weather, including the park's restroom facilities, visitor's center, and the fort itself.

Over the past few weeks, the Bureau of Indian Affairs (BIA) and the Tribal Assistance Coordination Group (TAC-G) have been assisting Tribes in Nevada prepare for potential flooding as a result of the excessive mountain snowpack. Due to warmer weather in the region, the excessive snowmelt may impact area rivers and waterways, threatening the lives and property of Tribal members, as well as roads, bridges, emergency response capabilities, and Tribal infrastructure. BIA and the TAC-G have worked together on efforts in the northern Nevada area to provide disaster response planning and pre-flood technical assistance to the Yerington Paiute, Walker River Paiute, and Fallon/Shoshone Paiute Tribes. Each Tribe is threatened with moderate to major flooding, as predicted by forecast and weather modeling.

In Georgia, the West Mims Fire in the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge has burned 152,478 (no change) acres. The fire is 65-percent (no change) contained and managed by a Type-1 Incident Management Team with 777 (-15) personnel, including 119 (-9) DOI personnel. There have been 6 (no change) responder injuries reported, and portions of the refuge remain closed to the public. A drying trend commenced yesterday, as the weather system that brought widespread rainfall across Wednesday moved east of the fire area. The containment date is November 1.

Top House, Senate Dems Ask Interior Not To Eliminate National Monuments.

The Hill (5/25, Manchester) reports that "top Democrats in the House and Senate urged Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke in a letter Thursday to not eliminate national monuments, warning that many national monuments across the country currently 'face an unprecedented threat.'" The Democrats said in the letter, "We are deeply troubled by the president's April 26 executive order establishing a process that could lead to the diminishment or outright repeal of national monuments designated by his predecessors." The Democrats wrote, "It is unconscionable to think that this administration would sell out America's outdoor heritage to benefit corporate interests in the oil, gas, and mining industries."

Secretary Zinke Headed To National Congress Of American Indians In June.

The Nation Sun News (5/25) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will "address the mid-year conference of the National Congress of American Indians" next month. Zinke said in a press release on Thursday, "It is a great honor to accept the invitation to speak at NCAI's Mid Year Conference. This will give tribal leaders and I an opportunity to discuss ways to empower the front lines of tribal communities. I am a supporter of building a stronger government-to-government relationship that will reaffirm tribal sovereignty, self-determination and self-governance in Indian Country.”

Tribes Bash Proposed Trump Budget Cuts To Native Americans.

The AP (5/25, Flaccus) reports that “dozens of Native American tribes in six Western states expressed outrage Thursday at President Trump’s proposed budget cuts to American Indian programs, saying they would erase significant progress on child welfare and climate change and gut social services and education on reservations across the U.S.” According to the article, “members from tribes in Oregon, Washington, California, Montana, Idaho and Alaska called on Congress to restore funding to tribes during budget negotiations.” They claimed that “the cuts ignore the treaty responsibilities to federally recognized tribes...and put a stranglehold on programs that have been chronically underfunded.”

Deepwater, US Wind Accept Maryland Terms For Offshore Wind Farms.

The Baltimore Sun (5/25, Dance) reports that “the developers of two wind farms planned off the coast of Ocean City are moving forward with their projects, accepting terms Maryland regulators laid out earlier this month in allowing them to collect subsidies from the state’s electricity customers.” The Sun adds, “Deepwater Wind and U.S. Wind have both notified the Public Service Commission that they have agreed to invest a collective $115 million in manufacturing facilities and port upgrades around Sparrows Point in southeastern Baltimore County, and to contribute $6 million to a state offshore wind business development fund.” The article also states that “the decisions mean Maryland is one step closer to being home to what would be the nation’s second – and by far its largest – array of offshore wind turbines.”

Enviros Add Endangered Species Claim To Keystone Suit.

Law360 (5/25, Sieniuc) reports that “environmental organizations on Wednesday added new claims against the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service in their suit against the U.S. Department of State and other agencies over the approval of the Keystone XL pipeline, telling a Montana federal court the service hasn’t seriously considered the project’s threat to whooping cranes and other endangered species.” According to the article, “in an amended complaint adding the FWS to the dispute, the environmental groups alleged the service’s finding that the pipeline would not likely harm certain endangered and threatened species.”

Time To Fix Our National Parks.

For the “Congress” blog of The Hill (5/25, Pierno, Contributor), Theresa Pierno, President and CEO of the National Parks Conservation Association, writes that “national parks are more popular than ever, welcoming a record-breaking 331 million visitors last year, and they pump more than $18 billion into local economies across the country.” However, “despite their enormous popularity and importance to our nation, our parks face many challenges, including $11.3 billion in needed repairs.” Pierno urges support for the National Park Service Legacy Act, “the House companion to an identical Senate bill introduced by Sens .Mark Warner (D-Va.) and Rob Portman (R-Ohio) earlier this year,” which “would allocate up to $500 million annually, through 2047, to the Park Service from existing revenues the government receives for oil and natural gas royalties.”
