Emergency Management

The National Weather Service (NWS) reports significant river flooding to continue in eastern Missouri, southern Illinois, and northeastern Arkansas. Another system of moderate to heavy rainfall will traverse the affected region through May 4.

USGS deployed 5 crews in central and eastern Missouri. Large drainage basin flooding continues to rise and set record (or near record) crests in the Gasconade, Bourbeuse, Meramec, and lower Mississippi basins. Ten crews are conducting High Water Mark and flow measurements. In Illinois, USGS crews have been deployed to make discharge measurements and ensure proper streamgauge operation in southern Illinois, where 44 streamgages are above flood stage.

In Georgia, the West Mims Fire in the Okefenokee National Wildlife Refuge has burned 100,517 (+351) acres. The fire is 8 (no change)-percent contained and managed by a Type-2 IMT with 466 (-2) personnel, including 72 (no change) DOI personnel. There are 87 (no change) residences and 17 (no change) commercial structures threatened. The containment date is November 1. A Type-1 Incident Management Team (IMT) will assume command today.

FEMA announced that federal disaster assistance has been made available for the Resighini Rancheria to supplement the tribe's recovery efforts in areas affected by flooding from February 8 to February 11, 2017. Federal funding is available to Resighini Rancheria on a cost-sharing basis for the repair or replacement of facilities damaged by flooding on the Resighini Rancheria. Federal funding is also available to the tribe on a cost-sharing basis for hazard mitigation measures.

Secretary Zinke To Visit National Monuments In Utah.

The New York Post (5/2, Morrongiello) reports that Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke will "travel to Utah's San Juan County next week to visit the Bears Ears monument, which is currently under review by the Trump administration." The Deseret (UT) News (5/2, O'Donoghue) reports that Zinke will "fly into Salt Lake City on Sunday and is set to tour spots in the controversial Bears Ears National Monument Monday — on horseback, San Juan County Commissioner Bruce Adams said Tuesday." On Tuesday, Zinke will also visit the Grand Staircase-Escalante National Monument.

Secretary Zinke Says Economic Considerations Will Play Into Offshore Lease Review.

Bloomberg BNA (5/2, Huq) reports that when Interior Secretary Ryan Zinke said that all options are on the table when it comes to opening new offshore leases, he hedged by saying that the two-year review would include market driven considerations. He said that in some areas the economics of a drilling campaign are not there. Zinke said, "We have to base it on science, you have to base it on seismic and look at where the market is in five years. There are some places where it is not going to be appropriate to drill. The margins are very thin at $50 per barrel. We are going to look at the economic data we have on our holdings."

House Republicans Begin Probe Of Antiquities Act.

The Hill (5/2, Henry) reports that “top Republicans on the House Natural Resources Committee on Tuesday outlined potential reforms for the Antiquities Act as the Interior Department kicks off its review of the law.” However, “Democrats have broadly supported maintaining the Antiquities Act.”

NPS Could Spend Trump’s First Salary Donation On Civil War Or Revolutionary War Battlefields.

USA Today (5/2, Korte) reports projects in three national parks that are Civil War or Revolutionary War battlefields “could receive money donated back to the government from President Trump’s presidential salary.” The “donation appeared to catch the Park Service off guard,” but Secretary of the Interior Zinke “quickly settled on a battlefield.” Records obtained under the Freedom of Information Act “show how the agency scrambled to quickly find suitable projects” following the donation, and also suggest that the President will deduct the donation from his federal income taxes.

Trump Was “Directly Involved” in Hunt For Tweeter Of Inauguration Crowd Photo.

CBS News (5/2, Kates) reports that “newly inaugurated President Donald Trump was ‘directly involved’ in the search for the person who, using the official National Park Service account, retweeted side-by-side comparisons of the crowds at Trump’s Jan. 20 inauguration ceremony and former President Barack Obama’s 2009 ceremony, CBS News has confirmed.” Emails released by the National Park Service in response to a Freedom of Information Act request “reveal that the new president was ‘concerned’ about the retweet.” In a Jan. 21 email to Shaun Cavanaugh, the agency’s Chief Information Security Officer, Tim Cash, Chief of Digital Strategy at the National Park Service, wrote, “Obviously, this has become a very sensitive issue, especially since the President has gotten directly involved and contacted Acting Director Mike Reynolds concerned about one of the images that was retweeted.”

BLM Headquarters Would Move West Under Colorado Republicans Proposal.

The Denver Post (5/2, Matthews) reports that the Bureau of Land Management “would be allowed to relocate its headquarters from the nation’s capital to a western state under legislation introduced Tuesday by two Colorado Republicans: U.S. Sen. Cory Gardner and U.S. Rep. Scott Tipton.” Both legislators “said they were motivated to propose the legislation because of the nature of the agency’s work, as well as where it has the most authority.” Gardner in a statement, “Moving BLM’s headquarters west is a commonsense solution that Coloradans from across the political spectrum support. Ninety-nine percent of the nearly 250 million acres of land managed by BLM is west of the Mississippi River, and having the decision-makers present in the communities they impact will lead to better policy.” The legislation “offered 12 states as a possible new home: Alaska, Arizona, California, Colorado,

Idaho, Montana, Nevada, New Mexico, Oregon, Utah, Washington, or Wyoming.”

NOIA President: Restore Access To Offshore Energy Resources.

National Ocean Industries Association President Randall Luthi argues for the Washington Examiner (5/3, Luthi) that the US needs “more than just onshore shale oil and natural gas to meet our energy needs.” Luthi praises “President Trump’s recent executive order designed to open more offshore areas to oil and natural gas exploration and production” as “a great first step,” but warns environmental activists are threatening “once again to curtail arbitrarily America’s production of oil and gas by misinterpreting the Outer Continental Shelf Lands Act.” Luthi argues President Obama’s “ban on offshore leasing in the Arctic and Atlantic poses an energy security risk to the nation and to the world” and says that “failing to make available oil and gas resources for development is detrimental not only to energy production but also for” American jobs.

Progress Made In Negotiations On Navajo Generating Station.

The AP (5/2, Davenport) reports that “Navajo Nation officials and a power utility that is the Navajo Generating Station’s managing owner are expressing optimism about reaching an agreement soon to keep the coal-fired plant operating through 2019.” The Salt River Project and the tribe “said in a joint statement released late Monday they have made ‘considerable progress’ in negotiations toward agreement on a replacement lease, which would preserve jobs and revenue for the Navajo Nation and the Hopi Tribe for at least two more years.”
