Thanks Randy.

System is working again. Attached are all 8 of the comments coded as "new information" and referencing marine monuments to date; the final set of comments is still being uploaded, and there are a few thousand comments from earlier still being reviewed.

It was easier to copy these than to go through the "export file" process, given the few comments. Some of our reviewers do not seem to share my concept of what "new information" is, but I'm sending them all anyhow. I did no editing except removing double/tripple-spacing between paragraphs in one comment.

Morning.

Ok, thanks for the update. If there is any way to get the few new information comments over today, that would be appreciated.

Our contractor's system is experiencing delays in uploading the last round of comments from regs.gov, for some of the same reasons regs. had trouble with them, including many attachments with hand-written post cards eating up computer processing capacity. The search function is working irregularly as a result.

This should be resolved in a day or so, and I will start sorting the marine comments out and sending them over next week - I will be gone and not able to access email from mid-afternoon tomorrow until mid-afternoon Monday,
