Dear Mr. Secretary,

I would like to thank you for taking time to meet with the First Lady and me during your trip to Maine. I enjoyed our discussion and trust you will give thoughtful consideration to all suggestions you received during your review. There are many stakeholders interested in this review, and the valuable information you receive from them all will be helpful as you craft your recommendation to President Trump.

I have attached an email from a constituent that I wanted to share with you, which reflects some of the mistrust that some Maine citizens have with the Quimby family. I have heard that for decades individuals leased camps along the East Branch of the Penobscot River. When Roxanne Quimby purchased the land, she cancelled the leases and kicked the lessees out. She then burned down some of the camps and kept the nicer camps. I understand she had the ability to do this as a private landowner, but her actions frustrated many Mainers in the area.

Again, thank you for considering this issue and taking the time to meet with all of the stakeholders involved in this important issue. I am confident you will make a recommendation to the President that takes all sides into account. Please don't hesitate to contact me should you require any information that will be helpful in your review.

Sincerely,

Paul R. LePage

I know there is someone here in Maine from Washington that is on the committee relative to the "National Monument" I know he's seeing a lot of beauty, but does he really know how she got that land. People may not remember, but when Roxanne Quimby bought that land on the west side of the east branch of the Penobscot River, there were several nice camps along the River. When she bought, she sent them all notices that they were to vacate the premises, take whatever personal property they wanted, and then she burned all their camps. People had had these camps for years and years, put their blood, sweat and hard earned money into them for their enjoyment and their kids enjoyment. All gone with a touch of a match. She offered them nothing!!! Maybe he should really know what she's capable of doing to get what she wants.
