It seems to be working now for comments, as I got through to our docket without any delays using Internet Explorer, although some features, such as "trending" are not available. When they tell you its fixed I will notify Public Affairs. This doesn't seem a long enough glitch to justify extending the comment period, as few people would file on Sunday night.

There is a problem with one of their "nodes". Not sure what that is, but they are working on it and hope to resolve it soon. Apparently, some people can get in, others can't. Depending how their service provider and how it routes messages. They will text me when the problem is resolved and I'll let you know.

As for extending the comment period, I can go into the record and manually change the end date. Because this isn't a rulemaking, we could do this. Normally, I don't change the end date until a new FR Notice is published. But it is an option for us.

great, thanks. If it lasts very long, can we get a 24-hour extension of the closing date?

The comment end date is properly set, so it's definitely a system problem:
