I'm not sure all contracting folks know to check that.

OK. Its surprising that they haven't, given that it is a government-wide requirement.

3. I'll ask Shulman, but I don't think they have done Privacy training.

In talking with Teri Barnett yesterday, she said all they would have to do is take that same online training we do to get up to speed. I think that's doable.

Sorry to have all this waiting for you, but my attention was focused elsewhere during the afternoon and its only now coming around the the privacy issues.

3) If FWS has not required privacy and security training of the DiscoverText folks, can you check with someone there to see if they did if for another Federal agency within the last 12 months, and if so, who, or if they do annually as part of the GSA list process.

If your contracting folks didn't require it and they weren't certified by anyone else, we will have no choice but to require it. However, in that case the Prof. ought to welcome it, since they can then tell other agencies they have completed the training.
