Thanks for standing with the co-op in support of national monuments

In the coming days, Secretary of the Interior Ryan Zinke is expected to make an announcement about the 21 national monuments still under review. We want to extend a heartfelt thank-you to everyone in the REI Co-op community who made their voices heard in support of these monuments. The numbers below show how we've come together across party lines, united by our shared love of the outdoors, to protect our public lands. We'll continue to advocate for these places and keep our members informed, now and for future generations.

44,000 COMMENTS

were submitted to the Department of the Interior through the REI website.

350+ OUTDOOR INDUSTRY CEOS,

from hunting and fishing to hiking and biking,
sent a unified appeal to the administration to protect our national monuments. REI helped spearhead the effort.

6 MONUMENTS UNDER REVIEW ARE NOW SAFE

Secretary Zinke has already announced that Sand to Snow,

Craters of the Moon, Hanford Reach, Canyons of the Ancients, Grand Canyon-Parashant and Missouri River Breaks national monuments are no longer under review and that all current protections will remain intact. We appeal to Secretary Zinke to do the right thing for the remaining 21 monuments.
