

Figure 3.17-1. National parks and monuments in the study area.

Across the state, Utah residents tend to participate actively in nature-based recreation and consider the natural environment as a substantial contributor to quality of life, culture and heritage. However, southwest Utah, especially Kane and Garfield counties, is the most economically dependent on these resources as tourist attractions (Crispin et al. 2008; Krannich 2008).