

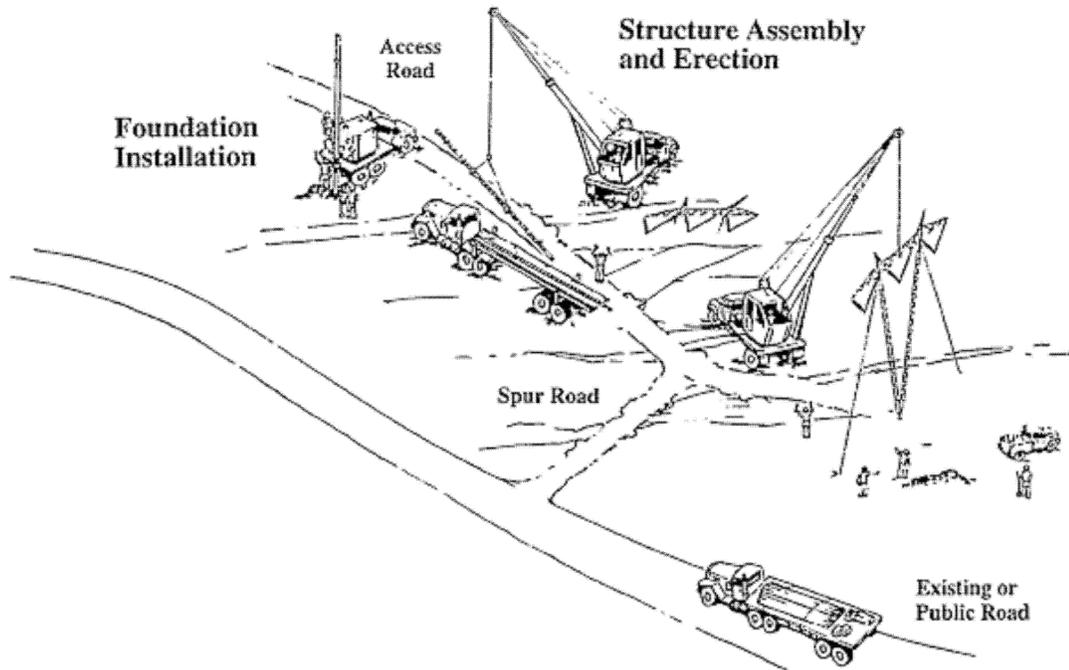

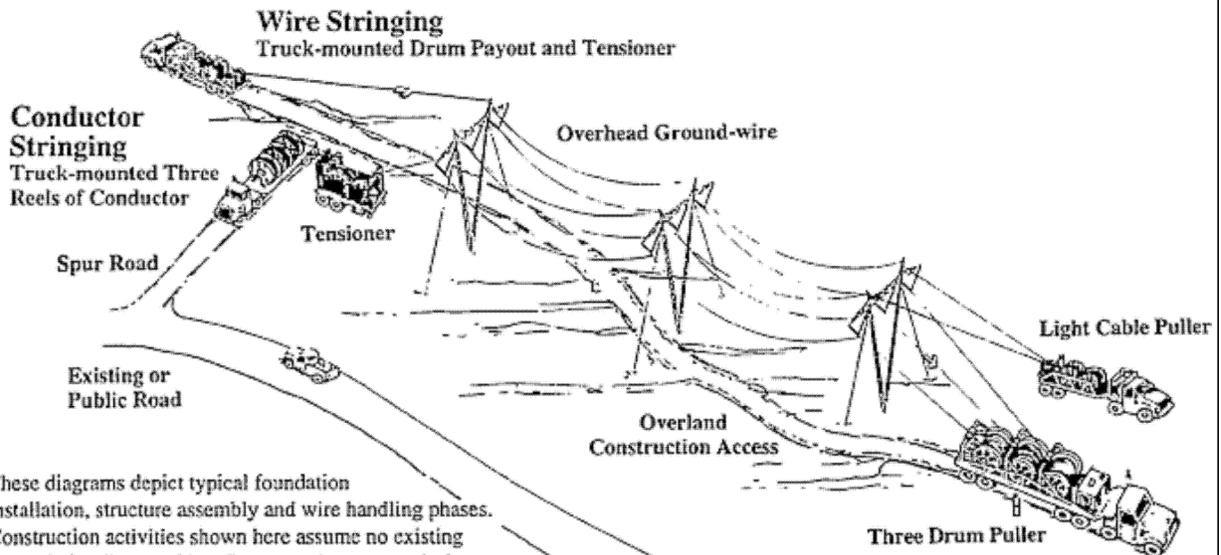

Figure 2-4

Foundation and Structure Construction Activities

Conductor and Ground-wire Stringing Activities

These diagrams depict typical foundation installation, structure assembly and wire handling phases. Construction activities shown here assume no existing transmission line corridor. In areas where transmission lines are paralleled, existing access roads would be used to the greatest extent possible, requiring only new spur roads to tower sites and temporary overland access.