Consultation with the public and pertinent Native American Groups and other organizations including the Native American Heritage Commission regarding the use, allocation, protection and condition of sites will continue. The purpose would be to identify changes in public attitudes and ascertain any new concerns for the cultural resources and measure the effectiveness of the management activities of this CRMP. Where any actions are proposed that may have impacts on the cultural resources, local Native American groups will be consulted to evaluate the implications of BLM actions. Cooperative Agreements with professional groups, colleges and universities will continue to be the proactive means of meeting the scientific research goals for the area as well as aiding in the mitigation of possible impacts to sites.
