Mural Selected for the Montrose Public Lands Center

MONTROSE, Colo. – Today, Katie Phillips, Bureau of Land Management volunteer services coordinator, announced that Pat Dwyer was the winner of the local mural contest. Local artists submitted mural designs depicting area resources managed by the Bureau of Land Management, U.S. Forest Service and National Park Service.

Dwyer’s concept includes high mountain peaks, alpine forests, rock canyons and gorges, desert and adobe foothills as well as desert valleys. Viewing windows illustrating people engaged in various activities will be incorporated throughout the mural. The public can view the design by going to:

“We’re looking forward to hosting Pat as he completes the mural that will be displayed in the Montrose Public Lands Center visitor center lobby at 2465 S Townsend Ave,” said Phillips.

The BLM, USFS and NPS will host an open house for public viewing when the mural is complete.
