Whitewater Classification

Rapid ratings are a general guide to relative difficulty. Severe weather conditions, extreme water levels and remote locations all contribute to the danger of white water boating.

Class I	Small waves, passages clear, no serious obstacles.
Class II	Medium-sized, regular waves; passages clear, some maneuvering may be required.
Class III	Waves are numerous, high and irregular; rocks, eddies, narrow passages; scouting usually required.
Class IV	Powerful, irregular waves; boiling eddies; dangerous rocks; congested passages; precise maneuvering required; scouting mandatory.
Class V	Exceedingly difficult; violent rapids often following each other without interruption; big drops, violent current, scouting mandatory, but often difficult.
Class VI	Limit of navigability, generally considered unrunnable.
